The Bible is not a book of abstract religious teaching. If it were, understanding its historical context would be of relatively minor importance, although even then questions about the circumstances of its composition could not be ignored. Furthermore, the Bible did not arise out of a single cultural and historical environment; it certainly is not the product of revelations given to a single man, as the Koran claims to be. If it were, understanding its historical background would be far simpler.

As it is, the writing of the Bible took place over a period of more than 1,000 years. Although most if not all the writers of Scripture were Israelite or Jewish, these authors lived in a wide variety of circumstances. The cultural backdrop to the Biblical stories includes Egypt of the pharaohs, Mesopotamia, Canaanite culture, Israel across the Late Bronze and Iron Ages, the royal court of Persia, the expansive Hellenistic civilization and the Roman Empire. The languages of the Bible are Hebrew, Greek and Aramaic, but there are traces as well of the influence of Egyptian, Ugaritic, Akkadian, Sumerian, Persian and Latin. Portions of the Bible were composed in Israel, Egypt, Babylon, Asia Minor (Turkey), Greece and Rome. The writers of Scripture were sages, kings, farmers, exiles, governors, fishermen and traveling preachers.

The literature of the Bible is itself of a wide variety, and a given genre is likely to have much in common with the literature of its day. Narratives that tell the story of God's people in simple yet absorbing tales run through the Bible in books as diverse as Genesis, Judges, Ruth, Esther and Acts. Legislative texts that have parallels in the law codes of Mesopotamia emerge in books such as Numbers and Deuteronomy. Hymns and devotional songs appear in the Psalms, and when set in comparison to the hymns and religious poems of Egypt, Ugarit and Mesopotamia, they display both striking similarities and telling dissimilarities to their counterparts. The Bible even contains love poetry (Song of Songs), and this, too, is both like and unlike contemporary Egyptian love poetry. Like the Egyptians and Mesopotamians, the people of Israel composed many proverbs.

Of course, differences can be as significant as similarities, and not every type of literature in the Bible has strong parallels outside its pages. The proclamations of the Hebrew prophets have limited parallels in ancient Mesopotamia, and it is difficult to find anything else that compares with the four Gospels of the New Testament. On the other hand, the apocalyptic visions of Revelation can be compared to the apocalyptic texts of "Second Temple" Judaism, just as the letters of Paul may be evaluated over against other epistolary literature of the Greco-Roman period. In short, the Bible is an amazingly diverse collection of texts, none of which originated in a vacuum.

The NIV Archaeological Study Bible focuses on the historical, literary and cultural context of the Bible. This context includes the history of peoples and places populating its pages, daily life in various periods and under widely diverse circumstances during Biblical times, and ancient texts that illuminate the Bible and the archaeology of the Biblical world. In addition, the articles in this Bible devote particular attention to challenges archaeologists and Biblical scholars face on the critical issue of the trustworthiness of Scripture. But why is there a need for a tool that focuses on historical context? Several answers apply:

1. Context is crucial to interpretation. Imagine reading the words of a political or religious debate without the benefit of any knowledge of the circumstances, customs or beliefs of those involved in the discussion/dispute. The reader would either be bewildered or would run the risk of grossly misinterpreting the issues and positions people were taking. It is foolish, even arrogant, to think that we can rightly understand the Biblical writers without knowing anything of their environment.
2. As described above, the Biblical world is complex and spans a great deal of history. The ancient world is simply too extensive and too diverse for us to expect a few passing comments on "background" to give us a meaningful awareness of the cultures that the Biblical writers inhabited.
3. A study of the context of the Bible is an encouragement to faith. Many modern Christians shun the study of the ancient world for fear that scholars will make them aware of troubling facts that will serve only to undermine their faith in the Bible. In reality, a careful study of the world of the Bible enhances our confidence in its historical accuracy and in its distinctiveness as the Word of God. Set against the astonishing variety of cultures that made up the Biblical world, the unity of the message of the Bible is remarkable. The writers of Scripture spoke in diverse times and places, but they were inspired by one changeless Spirit. And, of course, the only way to answer those who claim that historical facts undermine Biblical credibility is to take a firsthand look at those very facts.

4. Awareness of the context of the Bible is an antidote to the dangerous dismissal of history that we see too often in both the church and the academy. In our day the postmodern outlook all but rejects history and context. Under the influence of this movement readers simply refuse to hear the writers of Scripture on their own terms and instead assert that it is up to each reader to make whatever he or she will of the ancient texts. Many reject outright the suggestion that we are obligated to attempt to understand the objective of a passage's original writer. The author's intended meaning is thus rendered irrelevant to the modern reader, who feels free to interpret a text in any manner whatsoever. Such an approach makes a mockery of Biblical authority. Further, many well-intentioned Christian readers, although not fully committed to a postmodern way of thinking, tend to interpret the Bible strictly in terms of their own experiences and standards, without ever considering what a prophet or apostle was saying to the people of his own day. An awareness of the beliefs, conflicts, history and habits of the people of Biblical times forces us to confront questions like, "What did Paul actually mean when he wrote these words to the Corinthian church?"
5. Awareness of the world of the Bible instills within us a deeper appreciation for the writers of Scripture and a deeper love for the Bible itself. It is difficult for us to genuinely love someone we do not really know, and we cannot enter into the experiences and perspectives of Biblical people without first relating to their world. By looking at the tools with which they worked, the struggles they faced, the literature they knew and the customs under which they lived, we acquire a profound admiration for their faith and wisdom.

The NIV Archaeological Study Bible includes the following features:

- Over 500 insightful and accessible articles, many including full-color photographs, covering the following five general categories: Archaeological Sites; Cultural and Historical Notes; Ancient Peoples, Lands and Rulers; The Reliability of the Bible; and Ancient Texts and Artifacts.
- Bottom-of-the-page study notes geared to archaeological, cultural and historical themes and frequently cross-referenced to relevant articles and other notes.
- Detailed book introductions, including helpful, at-a-glance timelines and outlines.
- Charts and graphs on pertinent topics.
- Periodic citations (quotations) from the ancients, each tied to a particular article.
- Side-column cross references.
- Full-color interior throughout.
- Sixteen pages of full-color maps, along with an index for ease in location of the many place-names referenced in the articles and notes.
- Indexes to articles and photographs.
- Subject guide.
- Concordance.
- A glossary, cross-referenced to pertinent, bolded words within the articles.

AUTHOR, PLACE AND DATE OF WRITING

Genesis is, strictly speaking, an anonymous work. Historical tradition, however, as well as Biblical attestation, assigns authorship to Moses (see, e.g., Mk 12:26; Lk 24:27; Jn 1:45; Ro 10:5; 2Co 3:15). Moses authorship would not have required him to write the entire book. In fact, all of the Genesis events took place long before Moses was born, indicating that he must have used sources. We might view Moses as an editor/historian who, in addition to receiving God's direct and supernatural communication, drew together details of the family histories of Abraham and his descendants, as they existed in the Israelite community in Egypt, into a single text.

Scholars who question Mosaic authorship of the Pentateuch (Ge–Dt) generally support one or another variant of the Documentary Hypothesis (see “The Documentary Hypothesis” on p. 15).

If Moses did indeed write/compile Genesis, he must have done so during the Israelites' exodus wandering period, probably between 1440 and 1400 B.C. (see “The Store Cities of Pithom and Rameses” on p. 86, “The Pharaoh of the Exodus” on p. 98, “The Date of the Exodus” on p. 106, “The Hyksos and the Old Testament” on p. 121 and “The Conquest of Canaan” on p. 310). Those scholars who suggest that the Pentateuch was written as a single work during the exile typically place the date of authorship at about 550 B.C.

AUDIENCE

Genesis records the stories of the creation, the fall into sin, the flood, the call of Abraham and the early history of the ancestors of Israel. The Genesis stories were probably circulated among the Israelites living in Egypt, reminding them of their familial and spiritual heritage and explaining their current situation. Genesis preserved individual stories (like those about Joseph) that could afford hope to God's enslaved people. Promises to Abraham about the future of his progeny (e.g., 15:1–7) also would have encouraged them. Later, Israelites directly involved in the exodus, as well as their succeeding generations, no doubt read Genesis in order to understand this piece of the great saga of their national origin. The fulfillment of God's historical promises to the patriarchs served as a testimony to his continuing faithfulness.

CULTURAL FACTS AND HIGHLIGHTS

Genesis records the birth and early history of humankind. Not only did God create the physical world, but he also formed man and woman in his own image and endowed them with the gift of free will. Over time changes took place, including humanity's fall into sin and the resultant great flood.

Tribes, cities and civilizations ebbed and flowed, rising and declining in a rhythm that has characterized human history ever since. Centuries passed, and at some point God chose to concentrate his particular attention on one individual from an ordinary, idol-worshipping family—who in his turn opted to listen and obey. From such unimpressive roots began the triumphant—if often temporarily tragic—saga of redemption history.

TIMELINE

AS YOU READ

Note how quickly and irreversibly the human race turned its back on Eden and on perfect fellowship with God (chs. 2–3) and how God responded (chs. 4–8). Then, through the unlikely choice of a still-childless patriarch, God began to form the family from which the Israelite nation would spring (chs. 11–30; 49). Study the life of Joseph, from his years of slavery to his meteoric rise to power in a strange land to his revelation to his unsuspecting brothers (chs. 42–45). This book explains how and why the Israelites came to live in Egypt, setting the stage for what would happen to this special people in Exodus and beyond.

DID YOU KNOW?

- An individual in the ancient Near East could claim rights to a well on someone else's land (21:25–30).
- The bride price paid by a husband's family was to be held in trust to provide for the wife if she were to find herself abandoned or widowed (31:14–16).
- A man's seal, cord and staff were symbols of his individual and corporate identity—the ancient equivalent of an I.D. card or signature (38:17–18).
- Both the Egyptians and the Babylonians compiled “dream books,” containing sample dreams with keys to their interpretation (40:8).
- The philosophy behind the Egyptian practice of embalming was a belief that the body was to be preserved as a repository for the soul after death (50:2–3).

THEMES

Genesis, the book of beginnings, includes the following themes:

1. Creation. God created the world “very good” (1:31). There was wholeness and harmony between God and humanity, among humans and between people and the rest of the created order.
2. Sin. Sin entered the world through one man, Adam (3:1–19; Ro 5:12). Unbelief, human conflict, sickness and environmental degradation are its results.
3. The image of God. All human beings are created in the image of God; each person is God's likeness as a personal, rational, creative, moral being. Men and women were created equal.
4. God's global plan of redemption. Although God chose to work through one ethnic group in the Old Testament, his divine intention was that all nations would come to know him through Abraham's descendants (12:1–3). Abraham was chosen because of his faith, making him the father of all who come to God on the same basis.

The Beginning

1 In the beginning<sup>a</sup> God created the heavens and the earth.<sup>b</sup>
<sup>2</sup>Now the earth was<sup>a</sup> formless and empty,<sup>c</sup> darkness was over the surface of the deep, and the Spirit of God<sup>d</sup> was hovering over the waters.

<sup>3</sup>And God said,<sup>e</sup> “Let there be light,” and there was light.<sup>f</sup> <sup>4</sup>God saw that the light was good, and he separated the light from the darkness. <sup>5</sup>God called the light “day,” and the darkness he called “night.”<sup>g</sup> And there was evening, and there was morning—the first day.

<sup>6</sup>And God said, “Let there be an expanse<sup>h</sup> between the waters to separate water from water.”<sup>7</sup> So God made the expanse and separated the water under the expanse from the water above it.<sup>i</sup>
And it was so. <sup>8</sup>God called the expanse “sky.” And there was evening, and there was morning—the second day.

<sup>9</sup>And God said, “Let the water under the sky be gathered to one place,<sup>j</sup> and let dry ground appear.” And it was so. <sup>10</sup>God called the dry ground “land,” and the gathered waters he called “seas.” And God saw that it was good.

<sup>11</sup>Then God said, “Let the land produce vegetation:<sup>k</sup> seed-bearing plants and trees on the land that bear fruit with seed in it, according to their various kinds.” And it was so. <sup>12</sup>The land produced vegetation: plants bearing seed according to their kinds and trees bearing fruit with seed in it according to their kinds. And God saw that it was good. <sup>13</sup>And there was evening, and there was morning—the third day.

<sup>14</sup>And God said, “Let there be lights<sup>l</sup> in the expanse of the sky to separate the day from the night, and let them serve as signs<sup>m</sup> to mark seasons<sup>n</sup> and days and years,<sup>15</sup> and let them be lights in the expanse of the sky to give light on the earth.” And it was so. <sup>16</sup>God made two great lights—the greater light to govern<sup>o</sup> the day and the lesser light to govern<sup>p</sup> the night. He also made the stars.<sup>q</sup> <sup>17</sup>God set them in the expanse of the sky to give light on the earth,<sup>18</sup> to govern the day and the night,<sup>r</sup> and to separate light from darkness. And God saw that it was good. <sup>19</sup>And there was evening, and there was morning—the fourth day.

<sup>20</sup>And God said, “Let the water teem with living creatures, and let birds fly above the earth across the expanse of the sky.”<sup>21</sup> So God created the great creatures of the sea and every living and moving thing with which the water teems,<sup>s</sup> according to their kinds, and every winged bird according to its kind.
And God saw that it was good. <sup>22</sup>God blessed them and said, “Be fruitful and increase in number and fill the water in the seas, and let the birds increase on the earth.”<sup>23</sup> And there was evening, and there was morning—the fifth day.

<sup>24</sup>And God said, “Let the land produce living creatures according to their kinds: livestock, creatures that move along the ground, and wild animals, each according to its kind.” And it was so. <sup>25</sup>God made

1:1–31 The length of the creative days of Genesis 1 is not specified in the Bible. The Hebrew word for “day” may mean a period of light between two periods of darkness, a period of light together with the preceding period of darkness or a prolonged period of time. All three usages occur in the Bible. No one of them equates to exactly 24 hours, although the second one is near it. There is no indisputable indication as to which of the three is meant in Genesis 1. The Bible provides no specific statement as to how long ago matter was created, when the first day or creation began or when the sixth day ended.

1:1–2 Some scholars hold that there is a long gap between verses 1 and 2, during which God’s perfect creation came into a period of chaos through a great catastrophe. Hebrew syntax, however, leaves no room for such a view.

1:5 In ancient times, when a king named something or someone, he was thereby claiming dominion or ownership over that possession or individual (see 17:5, 15; 41:45; 2Ki 23:34; 24:17; Da 1:7).

1:12 There is much discussion about the question of “evolution” with relation to the creation, but the word evolution may be used in several different ways. If taken in the historical sense (the theory that everything now existing has come into its present condition as a result of natural development, all of it having proceeded by natural causes from one rudimentary beginning), such a theory is sharply contradicted by the divine facts revealed in Genesis 1–2. It is explicitly stated several times that plants and animals are to reproduce “according to their kinds.” Moses nowhere stated how large a “kind” is, and there is no ground for equating it with any particular modern definition of “species.” Yet Genesis teaches that there are a number (perhaps a large number) of “kinds” of plants and animals, which cannot reproduce in such a way as to evolve from one into another. Nothing in the Bible denies the possibility, however, of change and development within the limits of a particular “kind.”

Moreover, the creation of Adam is sharply distinguished from other aspects of creation, and the creation of Eve is described as a distinct act of God. Genesis 2:7 (in the Hebrew) clearly teaches that Adam did not exist as an animate being before he was a man, created after the image of God.

1:21 The phrase “creatures of the sea” refers to the name of a dreaded sea monster in Canaanite mythology (see “The Enuma Elish and the Biblical Concept of Creation” on p. 888). Old Testament poetry often refers to him as one of God’s most powerful opponents. In Genesis, however, the creatures of the sea are portrayed as part of God’s good creation, all of which is to be appreciated.

ANCIENT TEXTS AND ARTIFACTS

Ancient Creation Narratives

GENESIS 1 In contrast to the Biblical creation narratives, ancient creation stories from Mesopotamia,<sup>1</sup> Egypt and Syria-Palestine do far more than try to explain how the physical world came into being. Creation myths often elevated the particular god of a particular shrine to supremacy over all other gods in order to validate the prestige of that deity, that shrine or the city in which the shrine was located.

For example, Egyptian creation myths tend to assert that a primordial mound or "Island of Creation" arose from a primeval ocean and that a specific god created all things from that location. Several Egyptian shrines, however, claimed to be the site of that primordial mound and asserted that the god of their respective shrine was the great creator god.

At Memphis, it was Ptah. At Hermopolis, it was Thoth. At Heliopolis, it was Re-Atum. Here a sacred stone was said to mark the very spot where Re-Atum, in the form of a "Bennu" bird, alighted and initiated the creative process.

Common motifs in creation myths include a spontaneous generation of gods, sexual reproduction among gods and the deification of nature (e.g., of the sun and moon). A creation myth often focuses on geographic and other elements unique to the shrine associated with the myth. An Egyptian myth, for example, may pay special attention to the creation of the Nile.

Sometimes creation myths relate battles between gods and the monsters of a primeval, watery chaos, through which one or more deities rises to supremacy. Sometimes creation occurs when a god defeats a primeval monster and divides its body into two parts, which become heaven and earth or earth and sea, etc. The Babylonian creation myth Enuma Elish describes the god Marduk's defeat of Tiamat, the mother-goddess and sea monster.<sup>2</sup> After a terrible battle in which Marduk slays Tiamat, he cuts her body in half like "a fish for drying" and uses it to form the heavenly dome. This victory purportedly establishes Marduk's supremacy among the gods.

Greek creation myths are similar. After initial chaos, the primordial deities Gaia (earth-goddess) and Uranus (sky-god) emerge. A series of monster-like gods (such as Cronos, Typhon and the Titans) is born to them, but Zeus (son of Cronos) defeats these beings and establishes the present world order.

Humans in creation myths from various sources are typically created as drudges to perform the gods' "dirty work." Some myths depict humans as the gods' slaves, whose primary function it is to feed them with their sacrifices.<sup>3</sup>

The Genesis account implicitly challenges the claims of these ancient creation myths by affirming God's unity and sovereignty, by portraying the heavenly bodies and great sea creatures as his creations and by presenting humans as God's stewards—and indeed image bearers—rather than as an afterthought born of divine need or laziness.

The Genesis creation narrative refers to the sun and moon as the "great light" and the "small light." Why? By describing these celestial bodies in this way, the Bible reduces them to the status of mere physical objects that "rule" only in the sense that they emit light and demarcate the calendar. In contrast, in many ancient languages the words translated "sun" and "moon" also refer to the sun god(ess) or moon god(ess). For instance, the Hebrew word translated "sun" is shemesh, but Shamash is also the name of the Mesopotamian sun god. The Greek word translated "moon," selene, is also the proper name of a Greek moon goddess. Similarly, the ancients regarded the stars (or constellations) as divine beings. In contrast, the terse Biblical statement "He also made the stars" (Ge 1:16) demotes these bodies to the status of created objects.

The Genesis account rejects the central motif of pagan religion: the deification of nature. Interestingly, it does not seek to elevate Yahweh over other gods. Indeed, in the seven-day creation account (Ge 1:1—2:3) Yahweh is not named; the Creator is simply referred to as "God" (Elohim), a more generic term. Even Genesis 2—3 provides no sense that Yahweh needed to establish his supremacy over other deities. There is no conquest of other gods or monsters, and no shrine or city is said to be the place from which God began the creative process. No sacred object is mentioned. The God of Genesis 1 is indeed the universal God.

2:2–3 On the seventh day God ceased from his labors, later referring to this as an example for Israel to follow six days of labor with one of rest (Ex 20:11). No end to the rest of the seventh day is mentioned. As far as what the Bible tells us is concerned, God’s rest from creating still continues.

2:4–25 While Genesis 1 describes the creation of the universe as a whole, 2:4–25 covers one special segment of that creation. The linking word (v. 4) is translated in the NIV as “account,” but it means more—something like “subsequent/emergent account”: The Hebrew tôledôth, both in its individual meaning and in its Old

The Location of Eden

GENESIS 2 The name Eden might have had one of two origins: the Sumerian word eden, which means “steppe” or “open field,” or the identical Semitic word, denoting “luxury” or “delight.” In Scripture, Eden is not only the name of the garden in which the first humans resided but also a metaphorical representation of the Garden of God (i.e., Yahweh’s dwelling place; Isa 51:3; Eze 28:12–15; 31:8–18).

Eden’s precise location remains a mystery. Genesis 2:8 indicates that the Lord planted the garden “in the east, in Eden.” This suggests a location east of Canaan. In addition, the Bible associates four rivers with Eden: the Pishon, the Gihon, the Tigris and the Euphrates (vv. 10–14).

The Tigris and Euphrates are undoubtedly the two Mesopotamian rivers that still bear those names today.<sup>1</sup> The Gihon (possibly Hebrew for “to gush”) and Pishon (usually understood to be a form of the Semitic verb “to spring up”) are more difficult to identify.

A spring named the Gihon waters Jerusalem, but this location does not match the description of its route through the land of Cush (v. 13). Many scholars identify the Gihon as the Nile, since Cush is sometimes associated with Nubia, south of Egypt. If this association is correct, it is all but impossible to make sense of the description of Eden’s location, since this region nowhere converges with the Tigris and Euphrates.

Others identify Cush as the land of the Kassites, east of the Tigris, also known as Kush during ancient times. This theory makes better geographical sense. Finally, still other scholars posit that the Gihon and the Pishon were canals or tributaries of the Tigris and Euphrates.

Another challenge is determining the relationship of the four rivers to the single river that flowed through and watered Eden. Most scholars believe that they were downstream of the river of Eden, implying that all four rivers shared a common source and placing Eden in northern Mesopotamia or Armenia.

This supposition poses a problem, however, since the Tigris and Euphrates lack a common source. To suggest that the four rivers were upstream of the river of Eden makes some sense because these two rivers converge in southern Mesopotamia before emptying into the Persian Gulf. In this scenario Eden may still, as above, have been located in northern Mesopotamia or in the mountains in Armenia, from which the Tigris and Euphrates spring. Another possible setting would have been southern Mesopotamia, where they converge and end.

When the LORD God made the earth and the heavens—<sup>5</sup>and no shrub of the field had yet appeared on the earth<sup>a</sup> and no plant of the field had yet sprung up,<sup>b</sup> for the LORD God had not sent rain on the earth<sup>a1</sup> and there was no man to work the ground,<sup>b</sup> but streams<sup>b</sup> came up from the earth and watered the whole surface of the ground—<sup>7</sup>the LORD God formed the man<sup>c</sup> from the dust<sup>d</sup> of the ground<sup>k</sup> and breathed into his nostrils the breath<sup>l</sup> of life,<sup>m</sup> and the man became a living being.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>8</sup>Now the LORD God had planted a garden in the east, in Eden;<sup>o</sup> and there he put the man he had formed.<sup>9</sup> And the LORD God made all kinds of trees grow out of the ground—trees that were pleasing to the eye and good for food. In the middle of the garden were the tree of life<sup>p</sup> and the tree of the knowledge of good and evil.<sup>q</sup>

<sup>10</sup>A river watering the garden flowed from Eden; from there it was separated into four headwaters.<sup>11</sup> The name of the first is the Pishon; it winds through the entire land of Havilah, where there is gold.<sup>12</sup> (The gold of that land is good; aromatic resin<sup>d</sup> and onyx are also there.)<sup>13</sup> The name of the second river is the Gihon; it winds through the entire land of Cush.<sup>e</sup> <sup>14</sup>The name of the third river is the Tigris;<sup>f</sup> it runs along the east side of Asshur. And the fourth river is the Euphrates.

<sup>15</sup>The LORD God took the man and put him in the Garden of Eden to work it and take care of it.<sup>16</sup> And the LORD God commanded the man, “You are free to eat from any tree in the garden; <sup>17</sup>but you must not eat from the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, for when you eat of it you will surely die.”<sup>s</sup>

<sup>18</sup>The LORD God said, “It is not good for the man to be alone. I will make a helper suitable for him.”<sup>t</sup>

<sup>19</sup>Now the LORD God had formed out of the ground all the beasts of the field<sup>u</sup> and all the birds of the air. He brought them to the man to see what he would name them; and whatever the man called each living creature,<sup>v</sup> that was its name.<sup>20</sup> So the man gave names to all the livestock, the birds of the air and all the beasts of the field.

But for Adam<sup>7</sup> no suitable helper was found.<sup>21</sup> So the LORD God caused the man to fall into a deep sleep; and while he was sleeping, he took one of the man’s ribs<sup>8</sup> and closed up the place with flesh.<sup>22</sup> Then the LORD God made a woman from the rib<sup>hw</sup> he had taken out of the man, and he brought her to the man.

“This is now bone of my bones and flesh of my flesh;<sup>x</sup> she shall be called ‘woman,’<sup>y</sup> for she was taken out of man.”

<sup>25</sup>The man and his wife were both naked,<sup>a</sup> and they felt no shame.

The Fall of Man

3 Now the serpent<sup>b</sup> was more crafty than any of the wild animals the LORD God had made. He said to the woman, “Did God really say, ‘You must not eat from any tree in the garden?’”

<sup>2</sup>The woman said to the serpent, “We may eat fruit from the trees in the garden,<sup>3</sup> but God did say, ‘You must not eat fruit from the tree that is in the middle of the garden, and you must not touch it, or you will die.’”

<sup>4</sup>“You will not surely die,” the serpent said to the woman.<sup>c</sup> <sup>5</sup>“For God knows that when you eat of it your eyes will be opened, and you will be like God,<sup>d</sup> knowing good and evil.”

<sup>a</sup> 5 Or land; also in verse 6 <sup>b</sup> 6 Or mist <sup>c</sup> 7 The Hebrew for man (adam) sounds like and may be related to the Hebrew for ground (adamah); it is also the name Adam (see Gen. 2:20). <sup>d</sup> 12 Or good; pearls <sup>e</sup> 13 Possibly southeast Mesopotamia <sup>f</sup> 20 Or the man <sup>8</sup> 21 Or took part of the man’s side <sup>h</sup> 22 Or part <sup>i</sup> 23 The Hebrew for woman sounds like the Hebrew for man.

Testament use, tells how something emerges from what has preceded. Genesis 2:4, then, steps back into Genesis 1 to begin the study of what happened next, how out of God’s creative work there came the beginnings of human life and creation on Earth. This explains the often-alleged differences and supposed contradictions between the chapters. It is reasonable that chapter 2 gives a more detailed account of the creation of man while saying nothing about that of matter, light, heavenly bodies, plants and other animals. See “The Documentary Hypothesis” on page 15.

2:8 At the site of Eridu, situated near what was considered to be an ancient shoreline at the head of the Persian Gulf, clay tablets have been found that tell of a garden in the neighborhood in which grew a sacred palm tree. Further upstream, a short distance north of ancient Babylon, the Tigris and Euphrates flow close together so that canals connect them. Some consider this area to be the location of ancient Eden. See “The Location of Eden” on page 6.

2:9 Adam and Eve possessed from God’s hand both life and moral discernment. While ancient pagans believed that the gods intended for human beings to remain mortal, Adam and Eve’s access to the tree of life revealed that God’s will and intention for them was life. See “The Tree of Life in Jewish Imagery” on page 2075.

2:18–22 This is the only full account of the creation of woman in all of ancient Near Eastern literature.

<sup>6</sup>When the woman saw that the fruit of the tree was good for food and pleasing to the eye, and also desirable<sup>e</sup> for gaining wisdom, she took some and ate it. She also gave some to her husband, who was with her, and he ate it.<sup>f</sup> <sup>7</sup>Then the eyes of both of them were opened, and they realized they were naked; so they sewed fig leaves together and made coverings for themselves.

<sup>8</sup>Then the man and his wife heard the sound of the LORD God as he was walking<sup>g</sup> in the garden in the cool of the day, and they hid<sup>h</sup> from the LORD God among the trees of the garden. <sup>9</sup>But the LORD God called to the man, “Where are you?”

<sup>10</sup>He answered, “I heard you in the garden, and I was afraid because I was naked; so I hid.”

<sup>11</sup>And he said, “Who told you that you were naked? Have you eaten from the tree that I commanded you not to eat from?”

<sup>12</sup>The man said, “The woman you put here with me—she gave me some fruit from the tree, and I ate it.”

<sup>13</sup>Then the LORD God said to the woman, “What is this you have done?”

The woman said, “The serpent deceived me,<sup>i</sup> and I ate.”

<sup>14</sup>So the LORD God said to the serpent, “Because you have done this, “Cursed<sup>j</sup> are you above all the livestock and all the wild animals!

You will crawl on your belly and you will eat dust<sup>k</sup>

all the days of your life.

<sup>15</sup>And I will put enmity

ANCIENT TEXTS AND ARTIFACTS

The Serpent Motif in Other Ancient Near Eastern Literature

GENESIS 3 Throughout most of the ancient Near East, people revered and often worshiped serpents as symbols of royalty, wisdom, healing,<sup>1</sup> fertility, death and other forces, both harmful and beneficent. However, in ancient writings serpents and serpentine creatures played their most prominent roles as adversaries of both humans and gods:<sup>2</sup>

✦ In the Egyptian Myth of Osiris<sup>3</sup> the sun god Ra (sometimes spelled Re) has to contend with Apophis, a demon serpent who attempts each morning to overthrow Ra and thereby enfold the world in darkness. Consequently, Egyptian texts liken the pharaoh's enemies to Apophis, thus calling down curses upon their heads.

✦ The snake of the Sumerian Epic of Gilgamesh is somewhat reminiscent of the serpent in Genesis 3 in that it deprives the hero, Gilgamesh, of immortality. While Gilgamesh is bathing in a pond, a serpent robs him of the Plant of Rejuvenation which, if eaten, would have granted him eternal life. The serpent devours the plant and is rejuvenated as it sheds its old skin. Gilgamesh, however, is consigned to die as a mortal.<sup>4</sup>

✦ Serpents similarly oppose humans and gods in other Mesopotamian stories, such as the Etana Myth, Enuma Elish and Inanna and the Huluppu Tree.<sup>5</sup>

✦ In Ugarit's Baal-Anat Cycle, Baal and his consort, Anat,<sup>6</sup> defeat the seven-headed “twisting serpent,” Lotan. The word Lotan is related to Leviathan (crushed by God at the time of creation [see Ps 74:14]) but prophesied to reassert itself temporarily during the end times (Isa 27:1). See a discussion of God's dealings with a similar monster, Rahab, in Job 9:13, 26:12, Psalm 89:10 and Isaiah 51:9.

✦ The serpent of Genesis 3 plays an adversarial role, as do those in other ancient Near Eastern literature, but it is introduced simply as one of the creatures “the LORD God had made” (v. 1). God the Creator is omnipotent; his purposes cannot be thwarted by any creature. Although the serpent or sea monster motif in the Bible reflects the fact that Biblical writers incorporated well-known images from the ancient world into their writings, other Biblical material clearly demonstrates that these inspired authors did not accept the mythology behind the Mesopotamian or Egyptian stories.

3:20 When God named what he had made, he described for man the essence of each thing (1:5,8,10; 2:11–14). By allowing Adam to assign names, God enabled him to express his relationships to his fellow creatures: Adam named the animals (2:19–20) and the woman (2:23). Eve’s personal name stems from her function as mother of all “living” (human) beings (3:20).

In Hebrew adam is both a personal name and a general noun, standing for “mankind” or “humankind.” The latter meaning is found over 500 times in the Old Testament. Both usages occur in Genesis 1–3, where Adam as a personal name appears at 2:20 (cf. 3:17, 21; 4:25; 5:2–5; 1Ch 1:1).

3:24 This description of the cherubim is similar to that of the winged sphinxes that adorned the armrests of royal thrones in many parts of the ancient Near East, as well as of the statues of winged, human-headed bulls or lions that guarded the entrances to palaces and temples in ancient Mesopotamia (see “Angels and Guardian Spirits in the Bible and the Ancient Near East” on p. 1529).

4:4–5 The origin of sacrifice is a matter of dispute. The question is, Did sacrifice arise from the natural religious instinct of humankind, whether or not guided by the Spirit of God, or did it originate in a distinct divine appointment? Genesis records the first sacrifice, by Cain and Abel, but gives no account of the origin of the practice. The custom was clearly approved by God, and in the Mosaic Law it was adopted and elaborately developed. The view that the rite was initiated by an expressed command of God is based primarily on Genesis 4:4–5, which states that Abel offered God an acceptable sacrifice, as well as on Hebrews 11:4, which clarifies that Abel’s sacrifice was acceptable to God because of his faith. It is argued that Abel’s faith was based upon a specific command of God in the past, without which the sacrifice would have been a response to mere superstition.

4:7 The Hebrew word translated “crouching” is the same as an ancient Babylonian word used to describe a demon lurking behind a door, threatening the people inside. On the other hand, the term can simply mean to lie down.

ANCIENT PEOPLES, LANDS AND RULERS

Sumer

GENESIS 4 To the Israelites of Biblical times Sumer was an ancient, classical civilization, similar to what ancient Rome is to us. Sumer (Biblical Shinar) refers to that region of Mesopotamia ("Map 14" in the back of this Bible), south of modern Baghdad that enormously influenced the Biblical world. The term Sumerian applies to people who lived there from the mid-fourth millennium B.C. (and possibly much earlier). Their principle cities were Uruk (Biblical Erech), Agade (Biblical Accad), Ur, Nippur, Kish, Lagash, Isin and Larsa. Sumerian civilization and culture came to an end around 1750 B.C. The Sumerians' racial identity and origin are unknown, but they were not Semites (they did not belong to the racial group that included Israelites, Canaanites, Assyrians, Arameans and Arabs).

The Sumerians created the world's earliest writing system, cuneiform, a method also used with another ancient language, Akkadian. Sumerian cuneiform was in fact the basis for the creation of Akkadian cuneiform.<sup>1</sup> Cuneiform appears on about 250,000 known tablets dating from approximately 3200 B.C. to the first century A.D.<sup>2</sup>

Deciphering Sumerian has proven difficult because this language was linguistically isolated. Whereas English and German are related (an English speaker might guess that the German apfel means "apple"), there is no language related to Sumerian that helps to elucidate the meanings of its words. However, bilingual tablets containing both Akkadian and Sumerian have enabled scholars to gain a working knowledge of Sumerian.

Sumerians contributed in numerous other significant ways to other ancient Near Eastern cultures. They invented the wheel, the potter's wheel and the sexagesimal numbering system (based on the number 60) and compiled collections of laws. In architecture they developed the arch, dome and vault. Incredibly, 100-foot-tall (30.5 m) Sumerian ziggurats—pyramidal, multistoried temple towers—still survive. Their form seems similar to the structure described in the Tower of Babel narrative of Genesis 11, but a direct connection has not been established.

Sumerian mythology also strongly influenced ancient Near Eastern religion, including worship of the sun, moon, stars and several "dying gods," like Dumuzi (also called Tammuz).<sup>3</sup> Sumerian literature includes hymns,<sup>4</sup> proverbs, love poems, laments and epic myths,<sup>5</sup> and there are interesting Biblical parallels in these Sumerian texts.

4:21–22 It is difficult to date the beginnings of art. If some human being found pleasure in the shape of a stone axe or flint sickle, this might be described as an awakening of aesthetic sensitivity. For many reasons it seems reasonable to date the beginnings of art in historical cultures to some point during the mid-fourth millennium. The origin of the arts may be intended in verses 21–22, where Jubal and Tubal-Cain are mentioned.

5:5 It is uncertain whether the large numbers describing human longevity in the early chapters of Genesis are literal, serve a literary function, or both. The fact that there are exactly ten names in the list (as in the genealogy of 11:10–26) indicates that it almost certainly contains gaps, the lengths of which are summarized in the large numbers. Other ancient genealogies outside the Bible exhibit similarly unrealistic figures and also contain exactly ten names (see "The Sumerian King List" on p. 12).

Enosh, Seth lived 807 years and had other sons and daughters.<sup>8</sup> Altogether, Seth lived 912 years, and then he died.

<sup>9</sup>When Enosh had lived 90 years, he became the father of Kenan.<sup>10</sup> And after he became the father of Kenan, Enosh lived 815 years and had other sons and daughters.<sup>11</sup> Altogether, Enosh lived 905 years, and then he died.

<sup>12</sup>When Kenan had lived 70 years, he became the father of Mahalalel.<sup>13</sup> And after he became the father of Mahalalel, Kenan lived 840 years and had other sons and daughters.<sup>14</sup> Altogether, Kenan lived 910 years, and then he died.

<sup>15</sup>When Mahalalel had lived 65 years, he became the father of Jared.<sup>16</sup> And after he became the father of Jared, Mahalalel lived 830 years and had other sons and daughters.<sup>17</sup> Altogether, Mahalalel lived 895 years, and then he died.

<sup>28</sup>When Lamech had lived 182 years, he had a son.<sup>29</sup> He named him Noah<sup>a</sup> and said, "He will comfort us in the labor and painful toil of our hands caused by the ground the LORD has cursed."<sup>d</sup> <sup>30</sup>After Noah was born, Lamech lived 595 years and had other sons and daughters.<sup>31</sup> Altogether, Lamech lived 777 years, and then he died.

5:24 Abram would later walk "before" God (17:1), but of Enoch and Noah alone it is written that they walked "with God" (5:24; 6:9; emphasis added). Walking with God is a relic of the first Paradise when people walked and talked with God in holy familiarity, and it anticipates a new paradise (Rev 21:3; 22:3–40).

GENESIS 5 The Sumerian King List, an ancient record of the kings of Sumer and Akkad, was originally composed in the late third millennium B.C. during the reign of Utu-hegal of Uruk ("Map 1" in the back of this Bible), in order to legitimize the ruling dynasty. It displays striking similarities to the genealogies of Genesis.

The preamble begins with intriguing terminology: "when kingship was lowered from heaven." It goes on to list the succession of kings, the lengths of their reigns and the respective cities from which they ruled. The kings are recorded to have enjoyed extraordinarly long reigns. For example, "En-men-lu-Anna ruled 43,200 years; En-men-gal-Anna ruled 28,800 years." A great flood is then purported to have covered the land, after which kings were recorded as having significantly shorter reigns, though still of incredible duration (140 to 1,200 years). The genealogies in Genesis are also divided into pre- and post-flood periods, with longer life spans prior to the catastrophic deluge of Genesis 5 and significantly lesser longevity after it (ch. 11). Unlike the King List, however, the early Genesis genealogies do not serve to legitimate later kings.

Ancient Flood Narratives

GENESIS 6 The traditions of ancient peoples throughout the world share in common the inclusion of flood stories. The Mesopotamian accounts have garnered the most discussion since they are culturally closer to the Biblical material than any of the other non-Scriptural narratives. The most famous Mesopotamian flood account is the Babylonian version, found in the library of the Assyrian king Ashurbanipal (seventh century B.C.) as part of the larger Epic of Gilgamesh.<sup>1</sup>

In this epic, Gilgamesh searches for a man named Utnapishtum (the equivalent of the Biblical Noah), whose story is then recounted. When one of the highest gods, Enlil, becomes annoyed by the cacophony of noise coming from human beings, he decides to inundate and destroy them all in a catastrophic deluge. Enki, the god of waters, reveals Enlil's intent to the mortal Utnapishtum, directing him to construct an enormous boat and load it with pairs of animals. Instructed not to reveal the reason for this mystifying building project, Utnapishtum is further commanded at a critical point to take his wife on board with him. For seven harried days and nights Utnapishtum and his wife are tossed about in this vessel as floodwaters engulf the earth. When the waters finally subside, the boat lodges atop a tall mountain. Utnapishtum sends out a dove, a swallow and a raven, the last of which fails to return, apparently having located nourishment.

The man then disembarks and offers lavish sacrifices to the gods, who in turn bestow eternal life upon him and his wife for having safeguarded the future of humans and animals.

An Akkadian account dating to around 1600 B.C. recounts basically the same tale as that embedded in the Babylonian Epic of Gilgamesh, except that the Noah-character is named Atra-hasis.<sup>2</sup> An even earlier Sumerian version, known as the Eridu Genesis, contains the stories of creation and the development of the first cities, along with an account of the great flood. Here the hero is Ziusudra.<sup>3</sup>

Bible readers will immediately recognize the similarities between the Mesopotamian and Biblical accounts. But there are significant differences, too. According to the Bible God was not simply irritated by the din of humanity; he was profoundly grieved, to the point that “his heart was filled with pain” by the magnitude of human sin (6:5–7). Nor was his plan thwarted by the cunning of another deity; God himself chose to preserve both humanity and animal life through Noah (vv. 13–22). Genesis also attests to a longer flood period and, although God made a covenant with Noah, he did not grant him immortality.

Assuming a later date for the Biblical composition, some scholars have suggested that Mesopotamian accounts may have served as a prototype for the narrative in Genesis. But most researchers believe that the Biblical account is not simply a modification of the Mesopotamian stories but one of several versions of a common story. The differences can be attributed to the special revelation God gave the Biblical authors, including the writer of Genesis, by which he made known his plan of redemption. The other versions provide extrabiblical confirmation of the story of a great flood rather than demonstrating, as some have suggested, that the Biblical account is a myth.

ANCIENT VOICES

When the seventh day arrived,
I released a dove to go free,
The dove went and returned,
No landing place came into view,
it turned back.
I released a swallow to go free,
The swallow went and returned,
No landing place came to view,
it turned back.
I sent a raven to go free,
The raven went forth, saw the ebbing of the waters,
It ate, circled, left droppings, did not turn back.

<sup>5</sup>The LORD saw how great man's wickedness on the earth had become, and that every inclination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil all the time.<sup>16</sup>The LORD was grieved<sup>d</sup> that he had made man on the earth, and his heart was filled with pain.<sup>7</sup>So the LORD said, "I will wipe mankind, whom I have created, from the face of the earth—men and animals, and creatures that move along the ground, and birds of the air—for I am grieved that I have made them."<sup>8</sup>But Noah found favor in the eyes of the LORD.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>11</sup>Now the earth was corrupt in God's sight and was full of violence.<sup>o</sup><sup>12</sup>God saw how corrupt the earth had become, for all the people on earth had corrupted their ways.<sup>p</sup><sup>13</sup>So God said to Noah, "I am going to put an end to all people, for the earth is filled with violence because of them. I am surely going to destroy both them and the earth."<sup>q</sup><sup>14</sup>So make yourself an ark of cypress<sup>a</sup> wood;<sup>r</sup> make rooms in it and coat it with pitch<sup>s</sup> inside and out.<sup>15</sup>This is how you are to build it: The ark is to be 450 feet long, 75 feet wide and 45 feet high.<sup>b</sup><sup>16</sup>Make a roof for it and finish<sup>c</sup> the ark to within 18 inches<sup>d</sup> of the top. Put a door in the side of the ark and make lower, middle and upper decks.<sup>17</sup>I am going to bring floodwaters on the earth to destroy all life under the heavens, every creature that has the breath of life in it. Everything on earth will perish.<sup>18</sup>But I will establish my covenant with you,<sup>u</sup> and you will enter the ark<sup>v</sup>—you and your sons and your wife and your sons' wives with you.<sup>19</sup>You are to bring into the ark two of all living creatures, male and female, to keep them alive with you.<sup>20</sup>Two<sup>w</sup> of every kind of bird, of every kind of animal and of every kind of creature that moves along the ground will come to you to be kept alive.<sup>21</sup>You are to take every kind of food that is to be eaten and store it away as food for you and for them."

<sup>6</sup>Noah was six hundred years old when the floodwaters came on the earth. <sup>7</sup>And Noah and his sons and his wife and his sons' wives entered the ark to escape the waters of the flood. <sup>8</sup>Pairs of clean and unclean animals, of birds and of all creatures that move along the ground, <sup>9</sup>male and female, came to Noah and entered the ark, as God had commanded Noah. <sup>10</sup>And after the seven days the floodwaters came on the earth.

<sup>11</sup>In the six hundredth year of Noah's life, on the seventeenth day of the second month—on that day all the springs of the great deep<sup>c</sup> burst forth, and the floodgates of the heavens<sup>d</sup> were opened. <sup>12</sup>And rain fell on the earth forty days and forty nights.<sup>e</sup>

<sup>13</sup>On that very day Noah and his sons, Shem, Ham and Japheth, together with his wife and the wives of his three sons, entered the ark. <sup>14</sup>They had with them every wild animal according to its kind, all live-

7:11 To attribute volcanic activity to verse 11 is highly speculative. The fact that igneous rock (rock formed by the cooling of molten rock materials) is found between layers of sedimentary rock is not good evidence in and of itself for volcanic activity at the time of the flood. Sediments that have been laid down during historic time have been cut by lava from present-day volcanoes, and it has been observed that the oldest layers are also cut by igneous rocks. It is impossible to designate any particular rock body as being coincident with the flood.

THE DOCUMENTARY HYPOTHESIS

GENESIS 7 Until fairly recently a majority of scholars espoused the Documentary Hypothesis to explain the composition of the Pentateuch, the first five Old Testament books. This theory asserts that these writings were actually based on four books, none still extant, referred to (for ease of identification) as J (Yahwist or Jahwist), E (Elohist), D (Deuteronomist) and P (Priestly Code). The main arguments for this theory are the existence of repetition and apparent contradiction within these five books, as well as the use of different names for God.

According to this hypothesis:

J, the oldest document, included large portions of Genesis, passages from Exodus and Numbers and a few short texts from Deuteronomy. In Genesis, J referred to God as Yahweh ("the LORD") because the Biblical author believed that people began using the name Yahweh early in human history (see 4:26, a "J" text).

E, written somewhat later, followed the same story line as J. In Genesis, E referred to God as Elohim (the more generic "God") rather than as Yahweh because, according to adherents of E, the name Yahweh was not revealed until the exodus period (see Ex 3:15, an "E" text).<sup>1</sup>

D was essentially the book of Deuteronomy. Second Kings records that Hilkiah the priest located a copy of the Law of Moses when the Jerusalem temple was being restored.<sup>2</sup> According to the Documentary Hypothesis, however, Deuteronomy was drafted at this time as a pious fraud to justify Josiah's reformation.

P, written during the postexilic period following the return from the exile, included large portions of Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus and Numbers. In Genesis, P referred to God as Elohim since, like E, its author(s) assumed that the divine name, Yahweh, was first revealed at the time of the exodus (see Ex 6:3, a "P" text).

According to this theory the four documents were composed independently of one another but were over a prolonged period of time compiled and edited into the present Pentateuch, with much of the original E material deleted. Still, they argued, the Pentateuch retains significant redundancy and contradiction because the four documents often tell the same or similar stories with inconsistent details. Thus, for example, Genesis 1:1—2:4a was identified as the P account of creation, while the rest of Genesis 2 was seen as a throwback to the earlier J rendition.

In refuting these arguments it is helpful to recognize that repetition was an essential part of ancient Near Eastern narrative. Storytellers often repeated details two or more times (sometimes from a different perspective or with differing details), and narrators often recounted parallel stories (cf. the three instances of a patriarch passing off his wife as his sister: Abraham in chs. 12 and 20 and Isaac in ch. 26). For a much later example, see the accounts of Paul's conversion in Acts 9, 22 and 26. In an ancient narrative, repetition was viewed not as evidence of multiple authorship but as confirmation of a single author.

The argument about the names Yahweh and Elohim may be based on a misunderstanding of certain passages, such as Exodus 6:2–3. This passage appears in the NIV as "I am the LORD. I appeared to Abraham, to Isaac and to Jacob as God Almighty, but by my name the LORD I did not make myself known to them." This rendering makes it sound (in line with the P portion of the Documentary Hypothesis) as though the patriarchs did not know the name Yahweh ("the LORD"), thus allowing such scholars to attribute to J the passages in Genesis referring to Yahweh. But the text may alternatively be translated, "I am the LORD. I appeared to Abraham, to Isaac and to Jacob as God Almighty. And my name is the LORD. Did I not make myself known to them?" Rendered in this way, these verses do not assert that Abraham had never heard of "the LORD."

Many scholars today have abandoned the Documentary Hypothesis, agreeing that it is based on a faulty understanding of ancient Near Eastern literature and that it contributes nothing helpful to our understanding of the Pentateuch.

stock according to their kinds, every creature that moves along the ground according to its kind and every bird according to its kind, everything with wings.<sup>15</sup> Pairs of all creatures that have the breath of life in them came to Noah and entered the ark.<sup>f</sup> <sup>16</sup>The animals going in were male and female of every living thing, as God had commanded Noah. Then the LORD shut him in.

8 But God remembered<sup>n</sup> Noah and all the wild animals and the livestock that were with him in the ark, and he sent a wind over the earth,<sup>o</sup> and the waters receded. <sup>2</sup>Now the springs of the deep and the floodgates of the heavens<sup>p</sup> had been closed, and the rain had stopped falling from the sky. <sup>3</sup>The water receded steadily from the earth. At the end of the hundred and fifty days the water had gone down, <sup>4</sup>and on the seventeenth day of the seventh month the ark came to rest on the mountains of Ararat. <sup>5</sup>The waters continued to recede until the tenth month, and on the first day of the tenth month the tops of the mountains became visible.

<sup>6</sup>After forty days Noah opened the window he had made in the ark <sup>7</sup>and sent out a raven, and it kept flying back and forth until the water had dried up from the earth. <sup>8</sup>Then he sent out a dove to see if the water had receded from the surface of the ground. <sup>9</sup>But the dove could find no place to set its feet because there was water over all the surface of the earth; so it returned to Noah in the ark. He reached out his hand and took the dove and brought it back to himself in the ark. <sup>10</sup>He waited seven more days and again sent out the dove from the ark. <sup>11</sup>When the dove returned to him in the evening, there in its beak was a freshly plucked olive leaf! Then Noah knew that the water had receded from the earth. <sup>12</sup>He waited seven more days and sent the dove out again, but this time it did not return to him.

<sup>13</sup>By the first day of the first month of Noah's six hundred and first year, the water had dried up from the earth. Noah then removed the covering from the ark and saw that the surface of the ground was dry.

<sup>14</sup>By the twenty-seventh day of the second month the earth was completely dry.

<sup>15</sup>Then God said to Noah, <sup>16</sup>"Come out of the ark, you and your wife and your sons and their wives."

<sup>17</sup>Bring out every kind of living creature that is with you—the birds, the animals, and all the creatures that move along the ground—so they can multiply on the earth and be fruitful and increase in number upon it.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>18</sup>So Noah came out, together with his sons and his wife and his sons' wives. <sup>19</sup>All the animals and all the creatures that move along the ground and all the birds—everything that moves on the earth—came out of the ark, one kind after another.

7:19 Arguments for a universal flood have cited the inclusive language of verses 19 and 21 ("all the high mountains"; "every living thing"; emphasis added). Today, for various reasons, many conservative scholars defend a local flood. The crux of their arguments centers in the covenant relationship of God to people. Noah was not a preacher of righteousness (2Pe 2:5) to peoples of other areas but was concerned with the culture from which Abraham would eventually come. In addition, physical arguments have been raised against a universal flood: origin and disposal of the amount of water necessary to form a layer six miles (ten km) thick over the whole world; the effect on plant life of being covered for a year; the effect on fresh water life of a sea that contained salt from the ocean; and the fact that many topographical features of the earth (such as cinder cones) show no evidence of erosion by a flood and are thought to be much more ancient than the flood could possibly have been.

8:1 This verse implies that God did not leave the task of caring for the creatures aboard the ark entirely to Noah.

8:4 The name Ararat is related to the Assyrian region of Urartu, which became an extensive and mountainous kingdom (see Isa 37:38; Jer 51:27). It included much of the territory north of Mesopotamia and east of modern Turkey. The ark probably came to rest in southern Urartu.

8:13–14 The length of the flood is generally agreed upon within a few days. The Hebrews used a solar calendar, in contrast to the Babylonian lunar month and the Egyptian arbitrary 365-day year (see "The Jewish Calendar" on p. 241). Most authorities would put the number of days from the time the rain started (7:11) to the time Noah left the ark (8:14) between 371 and 376.

God's Covenant With Noah

9 Then God blessed Noah and his sons, saying to them, “Be fruitful and increase in number and fill the earth.<sup>a</sup> <sup>2</sup>The fear and dread of you will fall upon all the beasts of the earth and all the birds of the air, upon every creature that moves along the ground, and upon all the fish of the sea; they are given into your hands. <sup>3</sup>Everything that lives and moves will be food for you.<sup>b</sup> Just as I gave you the green plants, I now give you everything.

<sup>4</sup>But you must not eat meat that has its lifeblood still in it.<sup>c</sup> <sup>5</sup>And for your lifeblood I will surely demand an accounting. I will demand an accounting from every animal.<sup>d</sup> And from each man, too, I will demand an accounting for the life of his fellow man.<sup>e</sup>

by man shall his blood be shed;<sup>f</sup>
for in the image of God<sup>g</sup> has God made man.

<sup>7</sup>As for you, be fruitful and increase in number; multiply on the earth and increase upon it.”<sup>h</sup>

<sup>8</sup>Then God said to Noah and to his sons with him: <sup>9</sup>“I now establish my covenant with you<sup>i</sup> and with your descendants after you <sup>10</sup>and with every living creature that was with you—the birds, the livestock and all the wild animals, all those that came out of the ark with you—every living creature on earth. <sup>11</sup>I establish my covenant<sup>j</sup> with you: Never again will all life be cut off by the waters of a flood; never again will there be a flood to destroy the earth.”<sup>k</sup>

<sup>12</sup>And God said, “This is the sign of the covenant<sup>l</sup> I am making between me and you and every living creature with you, a covenant for all generations to come: <sup>13</sup>I have set my rainbow in the clouds, and it will be the sign of the covenant between me and the earth. <sup>14</sup>Whenever I bring clouds over the earth and the rainbow appears in the clouds, <sup>15</sup>I will remember my covenant<sup>m</sup> between me and you and all living creatures of every kind. Never again will the waters become a flood to destroy all life. <sup>16</sup>Whenever the rainbow appears in the clouds, I will see it and remember the everlasting covenant<sup>n</sup> between God and all living creatures of every kind on the earth.”

<sup>17</sup>So God said to Noah, “This is the sign of the covenant<sup>o</sup> I have established between me and all life on the earth.”

The Sons of Noah

<sup>18</sup>The sons of Noah who came out of the ark were Shem, Ham and Japheth. (Ham was the father of Canaan.)<sup>p</sup> <sup>19</sup>These were the three sons of Noah, and from them came the people who were scattered over the earth.<sup>q</sup>

9:1–17 The rainbow feature in the Biblical flood account is unique in that none of the stories from Babylon or elsewhere make mention of this covenantal sign. In the Bible the rainbow is the first of the covenant signs and provides the key to understanding all of them, including those of baptism and the Lord's Supper in the new covenant. The rainbow in the clouds speaks to humankind from God. God allowed Noah to understand what the bow meant to him: a visible declaration that the Lord will never again destroy the earth by flood. The rainbow, then, is God's promise made visible. Covenant signs express covenant promises to covenant people.

9:2–4 From now on animals would fear people and were given to be food for them, except for their blood.

9:5–6 Human government was instituted by the provision of capital punishment for murderers.

9:8–17 The sacrifices of Cain and Abel (4:4–5) demonstrate that the rite of sacrifice goes back almost to the beginnings of the human race. No priest was needed in these early sacrifices. The sacrifice of Noah after the flood (8:20–21) is called a burnt offering and is closely connected with the covenant of God described in 9:8–17. In the sacrifices of Abraham, several of which are mentioned (12:7–8; 13:4,18; 15:4ff), he acted as his own priest, making offerings to express his adoration of God and probably to atone for sin. In Genesis 22 God revealed to Abraham that he did not desire human sacrifices, a common practice in those days (see “Human Sacrifice in the Ancient Near East” on p. 182).

9:18–19 The term Semite is derived from Noah's son Shem (vv. 18–19; 10:21–31) and is used to identify a diverse group of ancient peoples whose languages were related. It is not certain, however, that they themselves were related by blood. See “The Hyksos and the Old Testament” on page 121 for a discussion of a particular Semitic people who settled in Egypt.

became drunk and lay uncovered inside his tent.<sup>22</sup> Ham, the father of Canaan, saw his father's nakedness and told his two brothers outside.<sup>23</sup> But Shem and Japheth took a garment and laid it across their shoulders; then they walked in backward and covered their father's nakedness. Their faces were turned the other way so that they would not see their father's nakedness.

<sup>24</sup>When Noah awoke from his wine and found out what his youngest son had done to him,<sup>25</sup> he said, “Cursed be Canaan!<sup>r</sup>

The lowest of slaves will he be to his brothers.<sup>s</sup>”

<sup>27</sup>May God extend the territory of Japheth<sup>b</sup>;
may Japheth live in the tents of Shem, and may Canaan be his<sup>c</sup> slave.”

<sup>28</sup>After the flood Noah lived 350 years. <sup>29</sup>Altogether, Noah lived 950 years, and then he died.

9:27 A tent was the typical dwelling of nomadic peoples. Tents in ancient times were of various shapes—round and tapering, flat and oblong. All of a nomadic family's belongings could normally be carried on one pack animal. A sheik would have had several tents. “Tent” in the Old Testament is often a reference to any habitation (v. 27; Job 8:22; Ps 84:10) and is frequently used figuratively as well (Isa 13:20; 54:2; Jer 10:20).

10:1 The list of Noah's descendants contains 70 names—a number that symbolized for the ancients totality and completion. It should be noted that the list is incomplete and apparently representative. The author penetrated selectively into various lines in order to achieve his final number.

Knowledge of the peoples and countries of the world was considered just as much an indication of wisdom for the ancients as knowledge of plants and animals. The “wisdom” represented by this catalog of known peoples was more than just academic. The point was that all these people groups had resulted from God's early blessing.

10:8–9 Nimrod is an enigma. Claims that he is to be equated with Gilgamesh or Hercules or other figures, or that he built the Tower of Babel (11:1–9), are without historical foundation. Some have suggested that Nimrod was a Mesopotamian god (such as Marduk) or king (such as Sargon), but this is pure speculation.

ARCHAEOLOGICAL SITES

EBLA

GENESIS 10 Excavating the city of Ebla (modern Tell Mardikh)—see “Map 1” in the back of this Bible—in northwestern Syria, archaeologists have discovered the single largest collection of third-millennium B.C. cuneiform tablets unearthed to date. Immensely important in the study of the ancient Near East, this site has yielded tens of thousands of complete texts and fragments. These texts, which include administrative, lexical, literary and diplomatic tablets, were discovered in the palace, which had been destroyed by fire. Ironically, the conflagration may have helped to preserve the tablets by baking them, although some more important tablets would have been purposely hard-baked when created in order to preserve their information for generations.<sup>1</sup>

The Eblaites utilized the Sumerian cuneiform writing system, adapting it to their Semitic language.<sup>2</sup> This has made decipherment and translation of the texts both difficult and tedious. In fact, early translations often vary drastically from more recent ones as more is learned about the Eblaites language. As a result, earlier scholars believed they had found a text parallel to the familiar Biblical proverbs, while today this so-called proverbial text is considered to be merely a list of Sumerian terms for cuts of meat! Some scholars had thought they saw references to the patriarchs (Abraham, Isaac and Jacob/Israel) in the Ebla tablets, but this also has turned out to be a false lead. At one point, ancient historians believed that information in the Ebla texts indicated that the city, during its zenith, controlled a vast empire from Egypt to the Persian Gulf. Many of these early readings have now come under renewed scrutiny as well, with the result that the extent of Ebla’s former power remains in question.

The importance of the Ebla documents for Biblical studies probably lies in what they can tell us in general about life in third-millennium B.C. Syria-Palestine, as opposed to their providing any specific parallels to the Bible, as had been hoped. The history of these documents again reminds archaeologists to exercise caution when attempting to link ancient historical and literary finds to Biblical material.

10:21 "Eber" is thought by some to be the origin of the word for "Hebrew." Although Eber was a distant descendant of Shem (see vv. 24–25; 11:14–17), his importance as the ancestor of the Hebrews is hinted at here. The Ebla tablets—(see "Ebla" on p. 19)—frequently refer to a king named Ebrium, who ruled Ebla for 28 years.

10:32 The text accounts only for people groups of which the Israelites were aware, with no hint at a world beyond the ancient Near East. The author made no attempt to provide a comprehensive list of all the peoples descended from Noah but addressed only how the known groups and nations of his day were related to Israel.

11:3 While stone and mortar were common building materials in Canaan, stone was scarce in Mesopotamia. Archaeological excavations indicate that mud brick and tar were more frequently utilized there.

11:4 Ancient cities were dominated by a temple complex, including a tower. The typical Mesopotamian temple tower, known as a ziggurat, was square at the base and had sloping, stepped sides that led upward to a small shrine at the top. Ziggurats were dedicated to particular deities. Their design made it convenient for a god to "come down" to his temple, receive worship from his people and bless them. In this case God did come down—and he was not pleased!

Mesopotamian ziggurats were given names demonstrating that they were intended to serve as staircases from Earth to heaven: The House of the Link between Heaven and Earth (at Larsa), The House of the Seven Guides of Heaven and Earth (at Borsippa), The House of the Foundation-Platform of Heaven and Earth (at Babylon) and The House of the Mountain of the Universe (at Asshur).

From Shem to Abram

Two years after the flood, when Shem was 100 years old, he became the father<sup>a</sup> of Arphaxad. <sup>11</sup>And after he became the father of Arphaxad, Shem lived 500 years and had other sons and daughters.

11:10–26 Pre-flood and post-flood genealogies seem to be schematic and incomplete. If 11:10–26 has no gaps, Shem outlived Abraham, but no other hint of this is given in the Biblical picture (see "Genealogies in Ancient Israel" on p. 1559).

In general, the time period from Adam to Abraham appears to have been extensive, and the genealogical lists in Genesis hardly serve as a timetable.

12:5 At a normal caravan pace of 20 miles (32 km) per day, the trip from Haran to Canaan (about 500 miles or 800 km) would have taken the better part of a month. Shechem and Bethel, located in the central hill country, were often rest stops along the way. They became major sacred sites in later Israelite history. See "Haran" on page 47, "Bethel" on page 59 and "Shechem" on page 340.

EVIDENCE FOR SERUG, NAHOR AND TERAH

GENESIS 12 According to the Old Testament the patriarchs' original homeland was in south-central Turkey, in an area known as Aram Naharaim (Ge 24:10) or Paddan-Aram (25:20).<sup>1</sup> Among the genealogical names of individuals listed in Genesis 11, three—Serug, Nahor and Terah—have survived from antiquity also as names of towns in this region. The names of these Biblical characters have been preserved in the very area from which the Bible specifies the patriarchs to have originated.<sup>2</sup>

Serug, Abram's great-grandfather, fathered Nahor at age 30 and died at age 230 (11:22–23). His name, which corresponds to the place called Sargi in Assyrian inscriptions of the seventh century B.C., lives on as modern Sürüc, 35 miles (56.5 km) northwest of Haran<sup>3</sup> (see "Map 1" in the back of this Bible).

Nahor, Abram's grandfather, fathered Terah at age 29 and died at age 148 (11:24–25). A town called Nahor is mentioned in 24:10 as the home of the descendants of Bethuel, another son of Nahor (24:24). This particular town also is mentioned in texts from Mari<sup>4</sup> and Cappadocia from the nineteenth through the eighteenth centuries B.C., as well as in Assyrian inscriptions from the fourteenth century B.C. Later Assyrian records from the seventh century B.C. refer to it as Til Nakhiri, which means "Mound of Nahor." Although Nahor's exact location is unknown today, numerous references in ancient texts place it in the Balikh River valley south of Haran.

Terah fathered Abram at age 70 and died at age 205 (11:26,32). A town named Til Turahi ("Mound of Terah") is mentioned in ninth-century B.C. Assyrian texts as being north of Haran ("Map 1"), also on the Balikh River.

At that time the Canaanites<sup>a</sup> were in the land. <sup>7</sup>The LORD appeared to Abram<sup>b</sup> and said, "To your offspring<sup>a</sup> I will give this land."<sup>c</sup> So he built an altar there to the LORD,<sup>d</sup> who had appeared to him.

12:6 A large tree was often a prominent feature at a sacred place, and the "great tree of Moreh" was located at a famous pagan sanctuary at Shechem in central Canaan. Abram built an altar to the true God there. 12:10 Famine was common in Canaan, since the region's productivity depended on rainfall. Egypt was less susceptible to drought and famine because of its dependence on the annual flooding of the Nile. Modern archaeologists and geologists have found evidence of a massive, 300-year drought cycle that occurred during the end of the third millennium B.C. and the beginning of the second—the time period to which Abram/Abraham traditionally is dated. See "Famine in the Ancient Near East" on page 70. See also the note on Ruth 1:1.

12:11 Sarai's beauty is praised in the Genesis Apocryphon (one of the Dead Sea Scrolls). The criteria for beauty, particularly in the case of older women, may have been substantially different in the ancient Near East from the standards we value today.

12:13 <sup>a</sup>Ge 20:2; 26:7 beautiful woman you are. <sup>12</sup>When the Egyptians see you, they will say, ‘This is his wife.’ Then they will kill me but will let you live. <sup>13</sup>Say you are my sister,<sup>9</sup> so that I will be treated well for your sake and my life will be spared because of you.”

<sup>14</sup>When Abram came to Egypt, the Egyptians saw that she was a very beautiful woman. <sup>15</sup>And when Pharaoh’s officials saw her, they praised her to Pharaoh, and she was taken into his palace. <sup>16</sup>He treated Abram well for her sake, and Abram acquired sheep and cattle, male and female donkeys, menservants and maidservants, and camels.

12:18 <sup>c</sup>Ge 20:9; 26:10

<sup>17</sup>But the LORD inflicted serious diseases on Pharaoh and his household<sup>b</sup> because of Abram’s wife Sarai. <sup>18</sup>So Pharaoh summoned Abram. “What have you done to me?”<sup>i</sup> he said. “Why didn’t you tell me she was your wife? <sup>19</sup>Why did you say, ‘She is my sister,’ so that I took her to be my wife? Now then, here is your wife. Take her and go!” <sup>20</sup>Then Pharaoh gave orders about Abram to his men, and they sent him on his way, with his wife and everything he had.

12:19 Absolute truthfulness was an important feature of Egyptian ethics.

13:2 Cattle are mentioned already in the first chapter of the Bible (1:24–26; “livestock” in the NIV), symbolic of their importance to the well-being of the human race. Eleven Hebrew and two Greek words are translated to indicate cattle, the species descended from wild members of the family Bovidae.

The Cities of the Plain

GENESIS 13 Sodom, where Lot chose to live, was one of five cities (Sodom, Gomorrah, Zoar, Admah and Zeboiim) referred to in the Old Testament as the “Cities of the Plain” (see Ge 13:12; 14:2). These cities were not mythical places but historical sites, and there is evidence of their destruction precisely as described in the Bible.<sup>1</sup>

Zoar (“Map 1”) was the city to which Lot fled at the time of the annihilation of Sodom and Gomorrah (19:18–22). We know its location from the Madaba map, a mosaic map on the floor of a church in Madaba, Jordan, depicting the Holy Land (only much later called Palestine) during the sixth century B.C. Ancient Zoar was on the southeastern shore of the Dead Sea, just south of the Zared River (Wadi Hesa) near modern Safi. Zoar has a long history. It is mentioned a number of times in the Bible (e.g., Isa 15:5; Jer 48:34) and was the site of the prosperous, Arab-controlled city of Zugar during the Middle Ages.

Approximately 8 miles (13 km) north of Safi lies the archaeological site of Numeira, which was also occupied during the days of Lot. The consonants of the Arabic name Numeira are similar to those of the Hebrew name Gomorrah. Quite possibly the ancient Hebrew name is preserved in this modern Arabic name.

The archaeological site of Bab edh-Dhra, 10 miles (16 km) north of Numeira, also was occupied during the days of Lot. This location had a significant settlement during the Early Bronze period.<sup>2</sup> Since Bab edh-Dhra is the largest ancient ruin in the region, it stands to reason that it should be identified as Sodom, the most famous of the Cities of the Plain where Lot “pitched his tents” (Ge 13:12).

<sup>18</sup>So Abram moved his tents and went to live near the great trees of Mamre<sup>a</sup> at Hebron,<sup>b</sup> where he built an altar to the LORD.<sup>c</sup>

The Coalition of Mesopotamian Kings

GENESIS 14 None of the invading kings or events mentioned in Genesis 14 have been identified or confirmed from archaeological evidence, but circumstantial evidence in extra-biblical sources does shed light on this text and supports its historicity. There is no reason to treat it as fiction, as many scholars do.<sup>1</sup>

“Amraphel, king of Shinar” (i.e., southern Mesopotamia) is no longer identified, as he once was, with Hammurabi of Babylon, but the area from which Amraphel is said to have come, Shinar, is Babylonia.<sup>2</sup>

The name Arioch is rendered as Arriyuk or Arriwuk in eighteenth- through fifteenth-century texts discovered at Mari<sup>3</sup> and Nuzi<sup>4</sup> in Mesopotamia. Both of these place-names are listed on “Map 1.”

Ellasar may represent either Asshur or Larsa, a city in southern Mesopotamia.

Kedorlaomer, the Hebrew version of Kudur-Lagamar, is comprised of known Elamite elements. Kudur means “servant of” and is included in the names of five other Elamite kings, and Lagamar was an Elamite goddess. Thus Kedorlaomer may be interpreted as “servant of Lagamar.”

Tidal is a form of Tudkhalia, the name of five Hittite kings who perhaps all lived later than this king. His title, “king of Goiim” (meaning “nations”), essentially means that he was the principal chief of a loose confederation of tribes, reflecting the decentralized nature of Antatolian politics in the nineteenth through eighteenth centuries B.C.

Contemporary records trace similar Mesopotamian confederations that formed after the fall of the Ur III Dynasty (c.2000 B.C.) and before King Hammurabi rose to power (c.

1750 B.C.). Immediately thereafter Assyria and Babylon controlled the entire region.

Curiously, King Yahdun-Lim of Mari (c. 1820 B.C.) left behind an account of a series of raids he made into Syria-Palestine in order to enforce the submission of local kings to himself, and this record is quite similar to what we see in Genesis 14. This does not mean that the Biblical episode and the raids conducted by Yahdun-Lim are one and the same, but it does make the point that the Biblical narrative fits in well with what we see in the history of the time.

14:10 Even today lumps of asphalt are often seen floating in the southern end of the Dead Sea. Flanked by hills on both sides, the Dead Sea is the lowest body of water on Earth (about 1,300 ft—396 m—below sea level).

14:13 Abram, the father of the Hebrew people, was the first Biblical character to be called a Hebrew (see the note on 10:21). Usually an ethnic term in the Bible, it was normally used by non-Israelites in a disparaging sense (see, e.g., 39:17). Outside the Bible, people known as the Habiru/Apiru (a word probably related to “Hebrew”) are referred to as a property-less, dependent, immigrant (foreign) social class rather than as a specific ethnic group. The Amarna Letters (clay tablets found in Egypt) contain negative descriptions of them. See “The Amarna Tablets and the Habiru” on page 347.

14:14 The home was the first and most effective agency for religious training. During the nomadic life of the patriarchs education was purely a domestic activity, and the parents were the teachers. God called Abraham as the father of the chosen people and put upon him the responsibility of training his children and his household to walk in the ways of the Lord (18:19; cf. Ps 78:5–7). The reference in Genesis 14:14 to Abram’s “trained men” implies a definite training program supervised by him. This is the only occurrence of the Hebrew term for “trained men” in the Bible. A related word used elsewhere in very ancient texts means “armed retainers.”

14:19 In ancient times the chief Canaanite deity was frequently referred to as the “most high,” “lord of heaven” and “creator of earth.” Based upon the terminology and location (Jerusalem was in central Canaan), Melchizedek was probably a Canaanite king-priest. By identifying Melchizedek’s “God Most High” with “the LORD” (v. 22), Abram bore testimony to the one true God, whom Melchizedek also had come to know.

14:22 In ancient times raising one’s hand was a standard oath-taking practice (see Dt 32:40; Rev 10:5–6).

ANCIENT PEOPLES, LANDS AND RULERS

The Patriarchal Period: Mesopotamia During the Time of Abraham

GENESIS 15 Near the end of the third millennium B.C., the Sumerian Third Dynasty of Ur lost the predominate influence it had enjoyed over most of Mesopotamia. The entire region experienced severe political instability as its city-states continually challenged one another, as well as those in northern Syria, and power frequently changed hands.

Kings with Amorite names ruled many of these city-states during the patriarchal period. The Amorites comprised a large and diverse group of northwestern Semitic tribes from Syria-Arabia. Many scholars once thought them to have been mostly nomadic invaders who brought with them the widespread political instability mentioned above, as well as the urban decline characterizing the end of the third millennium B.C. However, texts from Mari<sup>1</sup> and elsewhere indicate that the Amorites included both semi-nomadic pastoralists (raisers of livestock) and sedentary groups, generally organized around patriarchal figures who began settling in Mesopotamian villages and urban centers as early as the middle of the third millennium B.C. This cultural pattern is similar to the one we see occurring in portraits of the patriarchs of the Bible.

By the turn of the third millennium B.C. even larger numbers of Amorites had migrated south into Canaan<sup>2</sup> and southeast into Mesopotamia, perhaps pressured by the Hurrians from the north.<sup>3</sup> Many Amorites worked their way into positions of leadership. The most famous of these were Shamshi-Adad I in

Assyria (late nineteenth to early eighteenth centuries B.C.) and Hammurabi in Babylon (early to mid eighteenth century B.C.).

The Biblical patriarchs most likely lived within this early second-millennium period. The cross-cultural interaction taking place among the Sumerians, Akkadians and Amorites, as well as the Hurrians and Hittites to the north, is clearly reflected in the patriarchal narratives in terms of social customs, laws and languages.<sup>4</sup> Far from being anachronistic, the details of the Biblical stories of the patriarchs fit well into the historical environment of the late second millennium B.C. There is no evidence that should lead scholars to question their authenticity.<sup>5</sup> See "Map 1" at the back of this Bible.

<sup>2</sup>But Abram said, “O Sovereign LORD, what can you give me since I remain childless<sup>g</sup> and the one who will inherit<sup>c</sup> my estate is Eliezer of Damascus?”<sup>3</sup> And Abram said, “You have given me no children; so a servant<sup>h</sup> in my household will be my heir.”

<sup>4</sup>Then the word of the LORD came to him: “This man will not be your heir, but a son coming from your own body will be your heir.”<sup>5</sup> He took him outside and said, “Look up at the heavens and count the stars<sup>i</sup>—if indeed you can count them.” Then he said to him, “So shall your offspring be.”<sup>k</sup>

<sup>7</sup>He also said to him, “I am the LORD, who brought you out of Ur of the Chaldeans to give you this land to take possession of it.”

<sup>8</sup>But Abram said, “O Sovereign LORD, how can I know<sup>m</sup> that I will gain possession of it?”

<sup>9</sup>So the LORD said to him, “Bring me a heifer, a goat and a ram, each three years old, along with a dove and a young pigeon.”

<sup>12</sup>As the sun was setting, Abram fell into a deep sleep,<sup>p</sup> and a thick and dreadful darkness came over him. <sup>13</sup>Then the LORD said to him, “Know for certain that your descendants will be strangers in a country not their own, and they will be enslaved<sup>q</sup> and mistreated four hundred years.<sup>r</sup> <sup>14</sup>But I will punish the nation they serve as slaves, and afterward they will come out<sup>s</sup> with great possessions.<sup>t</sup> <sup>15</sup>You, however, will go to your fathers in peace and be buried at a good old age.<sup>u</sup> <sup>16</sup>In the fourth generation your descendants will come back here, for the sin of the Amorites<sup>v</sup> has not yet reached its full measure.”

15:2 The term servant in ancient times applied to anyone under the authority of another, implying that not all servants were domestics or slaves. In some passages of Scripture the word properly means “young man” or “minister.” It is applied to the relationship of men to others occupying high position—men such as Eliezer, whose place in the household of Abraham compared with that of a prime minister (v. 2; 24:2; Pr 14:35; Jn 18:20).

15:3 Ancient Nuzi law permitted a childless man to adopt one of his own male servants to be heir and guardian of his estate. It also allowed inheritance rights to be transferred to a son born to the primary wife after she had adopted her surrogate's son. See “Custom and Law in Ancient Mesopotamia” on page 36, “The Rights of the Firstborn” on page 43 and “Nuzi” on page 52.

15:7 Ancient royal covenants often began with the self-identification of the king and a brief historical prologue.

15:17 In ancient times parties solemnized a covenant by walking down an aisle flanked by the pieces of slaughtered animals (see Jer 34:18–19), perhaps signifying a self-maledictory oath. See “The Hittite Ritual of Passing Between the Pieces of a Sacrifice” on page 146.

16:1–2 The privilege of childbearing was appropriately viewed to be in God's hands. Conversely, the inability to bear children was seen as his punishment. Ancient people often considered a barren woman accursed, and in some cases her condition served as ground for divorce. Marriage contracts of the time were based on the Code of Hammurabi (an ancient Babylonian law code) and stipulated that an infertile wife should provide her husband with a surrogate child-bearer. See “Custom and Law in Ancient Mesopotamia” on page 36 and “Nuzi” on page 52.

When she knew she was pregnant, she began to despise her mistress.<sup>5</sup> Then Sarai said to Abram, “You are responsible for the wrong I am suffering. I put my servant in your arms, and now that she knows she is pregnant, she despises me. May the LORD judge between you and me.”<sup>d</sup>

<sup>11</sup>The angel of the LORD also said to her:

CULTURAL AND HISTORICAL NOTES

Naming of Children

GENESIS 16 Ancient Near Eastern peoples attached a deep significance to the naming of children. Unlike modern parents, who typically choose names, often long before a child’s birth, on the basis of cultural popularity, family tradition, personal preference or sound, Israelite parents tended to select names based upon circumstances surrounding the birth or words spoken near the time of birth. For example, in Genesis 35:18 we read that Rachel, dying in childbirth, named her son Ben-Oni (“my painful son”), although Jacob renamed the baby Benjamin (“son of the right hand”).

On rare occasions God revealed a name to a child’s parents before birth, signifying the divinely established role that child would play in history. For example, God specified the name Isaac, meaning “he laughs.” This name may reflect not only Abraham’s and Sarah’s laughter of disbelief upon learning that they were indeed to have a son in their old age (17:17; 18:12; 21:6) but also the ultimate joy Isaac would bring as the beginning of the fulfillment of God’s longstanding promise to Abraham (17:4–8; 21:1–2). Another clear example of God naming a child is his own Son Jesus (the Greek version of Joshua, meaning “he saves”), whose divinely revealed purpose was to “save his people from their sins” (Mt 1:20–21). See also Hosea 1:4, 6 and 9 for some more sobering names God designated for the offspring of the prophet Hosea.

The Covenant of Circumcision

17 When Abram was ninety-nine years old, the LORD appeared to him and said, “I am God Almighty;<sup>a</sup> I walk before me and be blameless.<sup>m</sup> I will confirm my covenant between me and you<sup>n</sup> and will greatly increase your numbers.”

<sup>3</sup> Abram fell facedown, and God said to him, <sup>4</sup>“As for me, this is my covenant with you:<sup>o</sup> You will be the father of many nations.<sup>p</sup> <sup>5</sup>No longer will you be called Abram<sup>q</sup>; your name will be Abraham,<sup>c</sup> for I have made you a father of many nations.<sup>r</sup> <sup>6</sup>I will make you very fruitful;<sup>s</sup> I will make nations of you, and kings will come from you.<sup>t</sup> <sup>7</sup>I will establish my covenant as an everlasting covenant between me and you and your descendants after you for the generations to come, to be your God<sup>u</sup> and the God of your descendants after you.<sup>v</sup> <sup>8</sup>The whole land of Canaan,<sup>w</sup> where you are now an alien,<sup>x</sup> I will give as an everlasting possession to you and your descendants after you;<sup>y</sup> and I will be their God.”

<sup>9</sup>Then God said to Abraham, “As for you, you must keep my covenant, you and your descendants after you for the generations to come. <sup>10</sup>This is my covenant with you and your descendants after you, the covenant you are to keep: Every male among you shall be circumcised.<sup>z</sup> <sup>11</sup>You are to undergo circumcision,<sup>a</sup> and it will be the sign of the covenant<sup>b</sup> between me and you. <sup>12</sup>For the generations to come every male among you who is eight days old must be circumcised,<sup>c</sup> including those born in your household or bought with money from a foreigner—those who are not your offspring. <sup>13</sup>Whether born in your household or bought with your money, they must be circumcised. My covenant in your flesh is to be an everlasting covenant. <sup>14</sup>Any uncircumcised male, who has not been circumcised in the flesh, will be cut off from his people;<sup>d</sup> he has broken my covenant.”

<sup>15</sup>God also said to Abraham, “As for Sarai your wife, you are no longer to call her Sarai; her name will be Sarah. <sup>16</sup>I will bless her and will surely give you a son by her.<sup>e</sup> I will bless her so that she will be the mother of nations;<sup>f</sup> kings of peoples will come from her.”

<sup>17</sup>Abraham fell facedown; he laughed<sup>g</sup> and said to himself, “Will a son be born to a man a hundred years old? Will Sarah bear a child at the age of ninety?”<sup>h</sup> <sup>18</sup>And Abraham said to God, “If only Ishmael might live under your blessing!”

<sup>19</sup>Then God said, “Yes, but your wife Sarah will bear you a son,<sup>i</sup> and you will call him Isaac.<sup>d</sup> I will establish my covenant with him<sup>j</sup> as an everlasting covenant for his descendants after him. <sup>20</sup>And as for Ishmael, I have heard you: I will surely bless him; I will make him fruitful and will greatly increase his numbers.<sup>j</sup> He will be the father of twelve rulers,<sup>k</sup> and I will make him into a great nation.<sup>l</sup> <sup>21</sup>But my covenant I will establish with Isaac, whom Sarah will bear to you by this time next year.”<sup>m</sup> <sup>22</sup>When he had finished speaking with Abraham, God went up from him.

<sup>23</sup>On that very day Abraham took his son Ishmael and all those born in his household or bought with his money, every male in his household, and circumcised them, as God told him. <sup>24</sup>Abraham was ninety-nine years old when he was circumcised,<sup>n</sup> <sup>25</sup>and his son Ishmael was thirteen; <sup>26</sup>Abraham and his son Ishmael were both circumcised on that same day. <sup>27</sup>And every male in Abraham’s household, including those born in his household or bought from a foreigner, was circumcised with him.

The Three Visitors

18 The LORD appeared to Abraham near the great trees of Mamre<sup>o</sup> while he was sitting at the entrance to his tent in the heat of the day. <sup>2</sup>Abraham looked up and saw three men<sup>p</sup> standing nearby. When he saw them, he hurried from the entrance of his tent to meet them and bowed low to the ground.

17:5 Ancient Near Eastern peoples attached a deep significance to names, and Israelite parents tended to select a child’s name based upon circumstances surrounding the birth or words spoken near the time of birth. By giving Abram a new name God marked him in a special way as his servant. See “Naming of Children” on page 28.

17:10 Although circumcision was practiced elsewhere in antiquity (see Jer 9:25–26; Eze 32:18–19), infant circumcision seems to have been unique. It was to be a sign of both the material and the spiritual aspects of God’s covenant with Abraham (see “Circumcision in the Ancient World” on p. 1840).

18:1–33 In the early days of humanity, before people had the written Word, before the incarnation and before the Holy Spirit had come to make his abode in human hearts, God sometimes appeared and talked with people. One of the loveliest and most instructive of the theophanies (visible appearances of God) is found in Genesis 18. From Abraham’s time on theophanies generally occurred when recipients were asleep, as in Jacob’s vision at Bethel (28:10–17). But God addressed Moses “face to face” (Ex 33:11). There is good reason to believe that theophanies before the incarnation of Christ were visible manifestations of the pre-incarnate Son of God.

18:1–8 Hospitality was one of the most highly regarded virtues of the ancient world. Social protocol required an actual meal to exceed what was first offered. Thus Abraham ordered fresh bread, a calf and a mixture of milk and yogurt. The fresh meat was particularly generous—not a normal staple in the ancients’ daily diet.

“Very well,” they answered, “do as you say.”

<sup>6</sup>So Abraham hurried into the tent to Sarah. “Quick,” he said, “get three seahs<sup>b</sup> of fine flour and knead it and bake some bread.”

<sup>7</sup>Then he ran to the herd and selected a choice, tender calf and gave it to a servant, who hurried to prepare it. <sup>8</sup>He then brought some curds and milk and the calf that had been prepared, and set these before them. <sup>9</sup>While they ate, he stood near them under a tree.

<sup>9</sup>“Where is your wife Sarah?” they asked him.

“There, in the tent,” he said.

<sup>10</sup>Then the LORD<sup>c</sup> said, “I will surely return to you about this time next year, and Sarah your wife will have a son.”<sup>t</sup>

Now Sarah was listening at the entrance to the tent, which was behind him. <sup>11</sup>Abraham and Sarah were already old and well advanced in years,<sup>u</sup> and Sarah was past the age of childbearing.<sup>v</sup> <sup>12</sup>So Sarah laughed<sup>w</sup> to herself as she thought, “After I am worn out and my master<sup>dx</sup> is old, will I now have this pleasure?”

<sup>13</sup>Then the LORD said to Abraham, “Why did Sarah laugh and say, ‘Will I really have a child, now that I am old?’ <sup>14</sup>Is anything too hard for the LORD?<sup>y</sup> I will return to you at the appointed time next year and Sarah will have a son.”

<sup>15</sup>Sarah was afraid, so she lied and said, “I did not laugh.”

But he said, “Yes, you did laugh.”

CULTURAL AND HISTORICAL NOTES

The Role of the Patriarch in Family Life

GENESIS 18 In order to understand the description of Abraham as the founding father of Israel's faith, we do well to recognize the key role a patriarch such as Abraham played in family life during this pre-monarchic period. The social structure of the time had three tiers: tribe, clan and family/household (Jos 7:14). The fundamental unit was the household (Hebrew bet av, meaning “house of a father”). It consisted of a patriarch—responsible adult male—his wife, his sons and their wives, his grandchildren and various other dependents. Since lineage/descent in patriarchal societies was passed along through sons, married daughters joined their husbands' households.

Exploration of Iron Age I<sup>1</sup> settlements, although they existed later than the patriarchal period, tells us much about Israelite patriarchal society. They indicate that such social units likely inhabited clusters of compounds with a few houses around a courtyard, encircled by a low wall. The elder patriarch and his immediate descendants would occupy one of the homes, with his married sons and their families living in other houses within the compound. In like manner Jacob, along with his sons and their families, sojourned as a small, patriarchal clan (Ge 46:5–7).

Various Biblical passages reveal much about Abraham's patriarchal household. The patriarch was responsible for the socioeconomic and religious well-being of his entire household (14:13–16). In Genesis 18, for example, Abraham's hospitality toward his three visitors reflected kinship responsibilities that even included the protection of vulnerable sojourners or resident aliens (cf.

Lev. 19:33–34). Providing water for dusty feet and serving an elaborate meal conferred honor upon guests, and, as in Abraham's case, indicated his generosity.

At the same time, Abraham in Genesis 18 may have realized that he was entertaining heavenly guests and thus have been especially hospitable. The bond established during their subsequent table fellowship engendered a blessing from one of the guests and established a basis for Abraham's intercession for Sodom.<sup>2</sup>

The sacrosanct nature of patriarchal hospitality recurs as a metaphor for God as the host of a feast in Psalm 23:5–6 (cf. Mt 8:11; Lk 13:29).

Abraham Pleads for Sodom

<sup>16</sup>When the men got up to leave, they looked down toward Sodom, and Abraham walked along with them to see them on their way. <sup>17</sup>Then the LORD said, “Shall I hide from Abraham<sup>2</sup> what I am about to do?<sup>a</sup>

<sup>18</sup>Abraham will surely become a great and powerful nation,<sup>b</sup> and all nations on earth will be blessed through him. <sup>19</sup>For I have chosen him, so that he will direct his children<sup>c</sup> and his household after him to keep the way of the LORD<sup>d</sup> by doing what is right and just, so that the LORD will bring about for Abraham what he has promised him.”

<sup>20</sup>Then the LORD said, “The outcry against Sodom and Gomorrah is so great and their sin so grievous <sup>21</sup>that I will go down<sup>e</sup> and see if what they have done is as bad as the outcry that has reached me. If not, I will know.”

<sup>23</sup>Then Abraham approached him and said: “Will you sweep away the righteous with the wicked?<sup>9</sup> <sup>24</sup>What if there are fifty righteous people in the city? Will you really sweep it away and not spare<sup>b</sup> the place for the sake of the fifty righteous people in it?<sup>h</sup> <sup>25</sup>Far be it from you to do such a thing—to kill the righteous with the wicked, treating the righteous and the wicked alike. Far be it from you! Will not the Judge<sup>c</sup> of all the earth do right?”<sup>i</sup>

<sup>26</sup>The LORD said, “If I find fifty righteous people in the city of Sodom, I will spare the whole place for their sake.”

<sup>27</sup>Then Abraham spoke up again: “Now that I have been so bold as to speak to the Lord, though I am nothing but dust and ashes,<sup>k</sup> <sup>28</sup>what if the number of the righteous is five less than fifty? Will you destroy the whole city because of five people?”

“If I find forty-five there,” he said, “I will not destroy it.”

<sup>29</sup>Once again he spoke to him, “What if only forty are found there?”

He said, “For the sake of forty, I will not do it.”

<sup>30</sup>Then he said, “May the Lord not be angry, but let me speak. What if only thirty can be found there?” He answered, “I will not do it if I find thirty there.”

<sup>31</sup>Abraham said, “Now that I have been so bold as to speak to the Lord, what if only twenty can be found there?”

He said, “For the sake of twenty, I will not destroy it.”

<sup>32</sup>Then he said, “May the Lord not be angry, but let me speak just once more.<sup>l</sup> What if only ten can be found there?”

He answered, “For the sake of ten,<sup>m</sup> I will not destroy it.”

<sup>33</sup>When the LORD had finished speaking with Abraham, he left, and Abraham returned home.

Sodom and Gomorrah Destroyed

19 The two angels arrived at Sodom<sup>n</sup> in the evening, and Lot was sitting in the gateway of the city.<sup>o</sup> When he saw them, he got up to meet them and bowed down with his face to the ground. <sup>2</sup>“My lords,” he said, “please turn aside to your servant’s house. You can wash your feet<sup>p</sup> and spend the night and then go on your way early in the morning.”

“No,” they answered, “we will spend the night in the square.”

<sup>3</sup>But he insisted so strongly that they did go with him and entered his house. He prepared a meal for them, baking bread without yeast, and they ate. <sup>4</sup>Before they had gone to bed, all the men from every part of the city of Sodom—both young and old—surrounded the house. <sup>5</sup>They called to Lot, “Where are the men who came to you tonight? Bring them out to us so that we can have sex with them.”<sup>r</sup>

<sup>6</sup>Lot went outside to meet them<sup>s</sup> and shut the door behind him<sup>7</sup> and said, “No, my friends. Don’t do

18:27 The expression “dust and ashes” is a play on words (aphar and epher) that signifies the origin of the human body from the ordinary chemical elements, contrasting the lowliness of a human being with the dignity of God.

19:1 The city gateway served as the administrative and judicial center where legal matters were discussed and prosecuted (see Ru 4:1–12; Pr 31:23; see also “The City Gate” on p. 392). Treaties witnessed by the city elders at the gate were as legally binding as written contracts are today.

19:2 The square was a large, open space near the main city gateway used for public gatherings. Important cities could have two or more squares (see Ne 8:16).

19:5 A sodomite was one who practiced that unnatural vice for which Sodom became noted. Although not named as such, the practice is referred to in Romans 1:27, and God strictly forbade it (Dt 23:17). Usually the practice was in connection with heathen worship, and its presence was a sign of departure from the Lord (1Ki 14:24).

THE DESTRUCTION OF SODOM AND GOMORRAH

GENESIS 19 According to Genesis 19:24 burning sulfur “rained down” on Sodom and Gomorrah, obliterating both of these cities, as well as the surrounding region (vv. 25,29). To date, the location of Sodom is still disputed (but note possible location of Sodom and Gomorrah indicated by a box and arrow on “Map 1” in the back of this Bible). Some people place it on the southwestern side of the Dead Sea, others on the north side of this body of water near the mouth of the Jordan and still others at modern Bab edh-Dhra on the southeastern side of the Dead Sea.<sup>1</sup>

Recently archaeologists have focused significant attention upon Bab edh-Dhra, where they have found evidence of several Early Bronze Age<sup>2</sup> occupation levels. Although a layer of ash and burned debris has been discovered in excavations there, the most dramatic evidence that this may indeed be the site of ancient Sodom comes from a nearby cemetery. The dead had been interred in charnel houses, or mausoleums, constructed above ground. Five of these structures were excavated and found to have been burned. A detailed examination of the largest of these (26 ft x 51 ft [8 m x 15.5 m]) indicated that the fire had begun on the roof. Geological investigations determined that an earthquake had added to the devastation.

Since there were several distinct occupation levels at Bab edh-Dhra (evidence of habitation at the site during various time periods), evidence had to be handled carefully. For example, there is a substantial ash layer associated with the occupation in Early Bronze I (the oldest of the Early Bronze occupation levels), but this cannot be associated with the Biblical destruction of Sodom because its ruins point to a date far earlier than the time of Abraham. In fact, this earlier, fire-related damage appears to have been the work of invaders. The Early Bronze III city is more likely to be the Biblical Sodom. A much larger city, evidence points to its destruction by a combination of earthquake and fire in approximately 2350 B.C. People evidently reoccupied this site in Early Bronze IV, but it appears to have been permanently abandoned for some reason around 2150 B.C.

this wicked thing.<sup>8</sup> Look, I have two daughters who have never slept with a man. Let me bring them out to you, and you can do what you like with them. But don’t do anything to these men, for they have come under the protection of my roof.”<sup>t</sup>

<sup>9</sup>“Get out of our way,” they replied. And they said, “This fellow came here as an alien, and now he wants to play the judge!<sup>u</sup> We’ll treat you worse than them.” They kept bringing pressure on Lot and moved forward to break down the door.

<sup>10</sup>But the men inside reached out and pulled Lot back into the house and shut the door. <sup>11</sup>Then they struck the men who were at the door of the house, young and old, with blindness<sup>v</sup> so that they could not find the door.

<sup>12</sup>The two men said to Lot, “Do you have anyone else here—sons-in-law, sons or daughters, or anyone else in the city who belongs to you?”<sup>w</sup> Get them out of here, <sup>13</sup>because we are going to destroy this place. The outcry to the LORD against its people is so great that he has sent us to destroy it.”<sup>x</sup>

<sup>14</sup>So Lot went out and spoke to his sons-in-law, who were pledged to marry<sup>a</sup> his daughters. He said, “Hurry and get out of this place, because the LORD is about to destroy the city!”<sup>y</sup> But his sons-in-law thought he was joking.<sup>z</sup>

<sup>15</sup>With the coming of dawn, the angels urged Lot, saying, “Hurry! Take your wife and your two daughters who are here, or you will be swept away<sup>a</sup> when the city is punished.”<sup>b</sup>

<sup>27</sup>Early the next morning Abraham got up and returned to the place where he had stood before the LORD.<sup>j</sup> <sup>28</sup>He looked down toward Sodom and Gomorrah, toward all the land of the plain, and he saw dense smoke rising from the land, like smoke from a furnace.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>29</sup>So when God destroyed the cities of the plain, he remembered Abraham, and he brought Lot out of the catastrophe<sup>l</sup> that overthrew the cities where Lot had lived.

Lot and His Daughters

19:30 <sup>m</sup>ver 19

<sup>30</sup>Lot and his two daughters left Zoar and settled in the mountains,<sup>m</sup> for he was afraid to stay in Zoar. He and his two daughters lived in a cave. <sup>31</sup>One day the older daughter said to the younger, “Our father is old, and there is no man around here to lie with us, as is the custom all over the earth. <sup>32</sup>Let’s get our father to drink wine and then lie with him and preserve our family line through our father.”

<sup>33</sup>That night they got their father to drink wine, and the older daughter went in and lay with him. He was not aware of it when she lay down or when she got up.

<sup>34</sup>The next day the older daughter said to the younger, “Last night I lay with my father. Let’s get him to drink wine again tonight, and you go in and lie with him so we can preserve our family line through our father.” <sup>35</sup>So they got their father to drink wine that night also, and the younger daughter went and lay with him. Again he was not aware of it when she lay down or when she got up.

<sup>36</sup>So both of Lot’s daughters became pregnant by their father. <sup>37</sup>The older daughter had a son, and she named him Moab;<sup>d</sup> he is the father of the Moabites<sup>n</sup> of today. <sup>38</sup>The younger daughter also had a son, and she named him Ben-Ammi;<sup>o</sup> he is the father of the Ammonites<sup>o</sup> of today.

and “Ammon” on p. 364). At any rate, the almost buried faith of Lot reappeared much later in Ruth, the Moabitess who was also the great-grandmother of David and thus a member of the Messianic line (Ru 1:16–18; 4:13–21).

The Negev: Its Climate and Features

GENESIS 20 For thousands of years people have grazed their flocks and herds seasonally in the Negev (see “Map 2” in the back of this Bible), the southern region of Israel sandwiched between the hill country of Judah to the north and the deserts of Zin, Shur and Paran to the south. In fact, the semi-nomadic patriarchs (Abraham, Isaac and Jacob/Israel) grazed their livestock in the desert-like Negev during the winter and migrated north to Judah’s hill country, around Bethel and Shechem, for the summer months (“Map 1”).<sup>1</sup> During the New Testament period the Negev was known as Idumea (Mk 3:8).

In Biblical times the Negev was mostly south of the Dead Sea, some 30 miles (48 km) from east to west and centered around Beersheba (again see “Map 1”). Open, rugged and sparsely populated, the region supports scrub brush but no forests. It has two seasons: a milder winter with periodic rains and a hot, dry summer. Because less than 8 inches (200 mm) of rain falls annually in the Negev, the area is unsuitable for farming.

<sup>16</sup>To Sarah he said, "I am giving your brother a thousand shekels<sup>a</sup> of silver. This is to cover the offense against you before all who are with you; you are completely vindicated."

20:17 <sup>d</sup>Job 42:9 <sup>17</sup>Then Abraham prayed to God,<sup>d</sup> and God healed Abimelech, his wife and his slave girls so they could have children again,<sup>18</sup> for the LORD had closed up every womb in Abimelech's household because of Abraham's wife Sarah.<sup>e</sup>

21:11 <sup>p</sup>Ge 17:18 <sup>11</sup>The matter distressed Abraham greatly because it concerned his son.<sup>p</sup> <sup>12</sup>But God said to him, "Do not be so distressed about the boy and your maidservant. In this case Sarah was Abraham's half sister, the daughter of his father but not of his mother. Marriage to half sisters was not uncommon in ancient times.

20:16 The word "shekels," though not included in the Hebrew text, is correctly supplied here as the most common unit of weight in ancient times. Originally the shekel was only a weight, not a coin, since coinage was not invented until the seventh century B.C.

21:8 In the ancient Near East many children died before they reached the age of two or three (the usual age for a child to be weaned), so a child's weaning was a celebrated rite of passage.

21:11 Abraham's distress was due not only to love but also to legal custom. The tradition of his day, illustrated later in the Nuzi tablets, prohibited the arbitrary expulsion of a servant girl's son (whose legal status was relatively weak in any case). See "Custom and Law in Ancient Mesopotamia" on page 36, "The Rights of the Firstborn" on page 43 and "Nuzi" on page 52.

CULTURAL AND HISTORICAL NOTES

Custom and Law in Ancient Mesopotamia

GENESIS 21 Laws from ancient Mesopotamia provide various interesting parallels to the Genesis stories. In particular, numerous regulations illustrate the marriage and inheritance issues found in the accounts of the patriarchs. For example:

Just as Sarai procured an heir for Abram through her maid (Ge 16; cf. ch. 30), the Sumerian laws of Ur-Nammu (founder and ruler of Ur's Third Dynasty, c. 2044–2007 B.C.) allowed a husband to take a concubine after waiting in vain for his primary wife to bear children. As in Sarai's case, the primary wife might even have initiated the arrangement.

Hurrian law at Nuzi<sup>1</sup> (mid-second millennium B.C.) and the Code of Hammurabi in Babylonia (early eighteenth century B.C.) allowed a man to adopt as legitimate heirs any children he may have fathered through a slave woman (see 17:18).

In Sumer, the eldest son inherited the whole of his father's estate and assumed responsibility for his siblings. But in Assyria and Nuzi brothers divided their father's estate, with the eldest son receiving a double portion.<sup>2</sup>

Nuzi law permitted inheritance rights to be transferred to a son born to the primary wife after she had adopted her surrogate's son. In a similar manner Isaac (although born after Ishmael) had the right to be Abraham's chief heir (21:12).

Neo-Babylonian law included the provision that sons born to a concubine would be subordinate to any sons born to the primary wife and that the combined sons of the primary wife would inherit two-thirds of the estate.

The disinheritation of a son, a practice allowed in certain societies, generally required a court order that might be officially overturned if the father were found to have acted unfairly. Some scholars, based upon such a prohibition in Nuzi law, have questioned the legality of Sarah's demand to expel Hagar and Ishmael (ch. 21), which by analogy may indicate that Abraham lived under similar customs and laws. Indeed, Abraham was hesitant to comply with Sarah's wish and did so only after divine intervention (vv. 10–13).<sup>3</sup>

In addition to family legislation, certain laws and customs concerning contracts and other agreements mentioned in Genesis had parallels in Mesopotamia. Treaties discovered at Mari<sup>4</sup> and modern Tell Leilan (from the early second millennium B.C.) are strikingly similar to the treaty reports in Genesis 21, 26 and 31:

In each case a formal oath was requested and given.

The oaths were followed by reports of stipulations, frequently including a pledge of nonhostility.

The oaths generally involved ceremonial feasts or sacrifices (26:30) and a gift exchange of sorts, particularly if the parties to the agreement had met in person (cf. 21:27–30).

21:31 Beersheba, an important town in the northern Negev, marked the southernmost boundary of the Israelite monarchy in later times (see, e.g., 2Sa 17:11; see also "Beersheba" on p. 518). Though its authenticity is uncertain, there is an ancient well there called "Abraham's well" (see Ge. 21:25).

21:32 Abimelech is a Semitic, not a Philistine name. So it may be that the reference to the "land of the Philistines" is anachronistic and merely intended to indicate the location, not the race of Abimelech.

22:2 The author of Chronicles identified the "region of Moriah" as the temple mount in Jerusalem (2Ch 3:1). Today Mount Moriah is occupied by the Dome of the Rock, an impressive Muslim structure erected in A.D. 691. A large outcropping of rock inside the building is still pointed to as the traditional site of the intended sacrifice of Isaac. See "Mount Moriah" on page 37.

CULTURAL AND HISTORICAL NOTES

Mount Moriah

GENESIS 22 "Mount Moriah," according to 2 Chronicles 3:1, was the location in Jerusalem where Yahweh appeared to David, inspiring him to build an altar and make a sacrifice. Solomon later constructed the temple on the same site.<sup>1</sup>

Some scholars are hesitant to identify this location as being synonymous with the site where God tested Abraham's faith by the near-sacrifice of Isaac because Genesis 22:2 names Moriah as a region, not a specific mountain. Also, it seems incongruous that Abraham would have carried wood to Jerusalem, a forested area, rather than gathering it at the site of the planned sacrifice. On the other hand, it may not seem surprising that Abraham would have gone prepared to make the sacrifice and would not have wanted to go to the trouble of seeking out suitably dried wood after his arrival. Also, Moriah at Jerusalem can reasonably be described as about a three-day trek from Beersheba (see vv. 4, 19).

Genesis 22:14 indicates that later generations would know this site as "the mountain [or hill] of the LORD," language commonly used elsewhere for Zion/Jerusalem (see Ps 24:3; Isa 2:3; Zec 8:3). The name Moriah might be associated with a Hebrew verb meaning "to see" or "to provide," a theologically significant term appearing repeatedly throughout Genesis 22:1–19. In Jerusalem, as in no other place, the Lord would subsequently be "seen" and would "provide" for his people through the benefits of the sacrifices he would ordain. Based upon this association the Biblical authors may have assumed that Abraham was prepared to offer his sacrifice on the same mountain on which the Israelites would later offer theirs—Mount Zion in Jerusalem.

his servants, “Stay here with the donkey while I and the boy go over there. We will worship and then we will come back to you.”

<sup>6</sup>Abraham took the wood for the burnt offering and placed it on his son Isaac,<sup>i</sup> and he himself carried the fire and the knife. As the two of them went on together, <sup>7</sup>Isaac spoke up and said to his father Abraham, “Father?”

“Yes, my son?” Abraham replied.

“The fire and wood are here,” Isaac said, “but where is the lamb<sup>j</sup> for the burnt offering?”

<sup>8</sup>Abraham answered, “God himself will provide the lamb for the burnt offering, my son.” And the two of them went on together.

<sup>9</sup>When they reached the place God had told him about, Abraham built an altar there and arranged the wood on it. He bound his son Isaac and laid him on the altar,<sup>k</sup> on top of the wood. <sup>10</sup>Then he reached out his hand and took the knife to slay his son. <sup>11</sup>But the angel of the LORD called out to him from heaven, “Abraham! Abraham!”

“Here I am,” he replied.

<sup>12</sup>“Do not lay a hand on the boy,” he said. “Do not do anything to him. Now I know that you fear God,<sup>l</sup> because you have not withheld from me your son, your only son.<sup>m</sup>”

<sup>13</sup>Abraham looked up and there in a thicket he saw a ram<sup>n</sup> caught by its horns. He went over and took the ram and sacrificed it as a burnt offering instead of his son.<sup>n</sup> <sup>14</sup>So Abraham called that place The LORD Will Provide. And to this day it is said, “On the mountain of the LORD it will be provided.<sup>o</sup>”

<sup>15</sup>The angel of the LORD called to Abraham from heaven a second time <sup>16</sup>and said, “I swear by myself,<sup>p</sup> declares the LORD, that because you have done this and have not withheld your son, your only son, <sup>17</sup>I will surely bless you and make your descendants<sup>q</sup> as numerous as the stars in the sky<sup>r</sup> and as the sand on the seashore.<sup>s</sup> Your descendants will take possession of the cities of their enemies,<sup>t</sup> <sup>18</sup>and through your offspring<sup>b</sup> all nations on earth will be blessed,<sup>u</sup> because you have obeyed me.”<sup>v</sup>

THE CAVE OF MACHPELAH

GENESIS 23 Until his wife's death Abraham wandered through Canaan as a nomadic herdsman.<sup>1</sup> Needing a burial plot for Sarah, he purchased his first small slice of the vast territory God had promised his descendants (Ge 15:18). The purchase included the burial cave and the field in which it was located, both known as Machpelah and located in Hebron<sup>2</sup> (see “Map 1” in the back of this Bible). The writer of Genesis carefully noted that Sarah, Abraham (25:9–10) and Isaac (35:27–29) were all buried in this cave. Later, upon his deathbed in Egypt, Jacob/Israel instructed that his bones were to be brought to Canaan and buried at this location along with those of his grandfather (Abraham), grandmother (Sarah), father (Isaac), mother (Rebekah) and wife (Leah). See 49:29–32; 50:13.

Not surprisingly, the Israelites remembered this cave throughout the ages. A monumental enclosure was built over the site during the days of Herod the Great.<sup>3</sup> This beautiful 200 by 110 foot (61 x 33.5 m) structure, bearing a remarkable architectural similarity to Herod's temple mount in Jerusalem,<sup>4</sup> is still intact today. Inside it, above ground, six large, medieval cenotaphs (empty tombs serving as monuments) commemorate the patriarchs and matriarchs buried there.

A Byzantine church later constructed inside this enclosure has been converted back and forth from church to mosque following successive changes of rule (and thereby of religion) in the area. During the fourteenth century A.D. Muslims sealed the subterranean structures beneath the compound, but clandestine investigations have since been carried out. One twentieth-century examination, under the direction of Israel's Moshe Dayan, involved the nighttime lowering of a twelve-year-old girl, equipped with a camera, into the tomb area! Investigators reported the existence of a staircase, a long hallway and a simple room.

Nahor's Sons

The Death of Sarah

23:2 <sup>y</sup>Jos 14:15 <sup>z</sup>ver 19; Ge 13:18 23 Sarah lived to be a hundred and twenty-seven years old. <sup>2</sup>She died at Kiriath Arba<sup>y</sup> (that is, Hebron)<sup>z</sup> in the land of Canaan, and Abraham went to mourn for Sarah and to weep over her.

23:3 <sup>a</sup>Ge 17:8; 1Ch 29:15; Ps 105:12; Heb 11:9,13 3 Then Abraham rose from beside his dead wife and spoke to the Hittites. <sup>a</sup>He said, <sup>4</sup>"I am an alien and a stranger<sup>a</sup> among you. Sell me some property for a burial site here so I can bury my dead."

23:6 <sup>b</sup>Ge 14:14-16; 24:35 6 The Hittites replied to Abraham, <sup>6</sup>"Sir, listen to us. You are a mighty prince<sup>b</sup> among us. Bury your dead in the choicest of our tombs. None of us will refuse you his tomb for burying your dead."

23:8 <sup>c</sup>Ge 25:9 8 Then Abraham rose and bowed down before the people of the land, the Hittites. <sup>8</sup>He said to them, "If you are willing to let me bury my dead, then listen to me and intercede with Ephron son of Zohar<sup>c</sup> on my behalf<sup>o</sup> so he will sell me the cave of Machpelah, which belongs to him and is at the end of his field. Ask him to sell it to me for the full price as a burial site among you."

23:10 <sup>d</sup>Ge 34:20-24; Ru 4:4 10 Ephron the Hittite was sitting among his people and he replied to Abraham in the hearing of all the Hittites who had come to the gate<sup>d</sup> of his city. <sup>11</sup>"No, my lord," he said. <sup>12</sup>"Listen to me; I give<sup>b</sup> you the field, and I give<sup>b</sup> you the cave that is in it. I give<sup>b</sup> it to you in the presence of my people. Bury your dead."

23:11 <sup>e</sup>2Sa 24:23 11 Again Abraham bowed down before the people of the land <sup>13</sup>and he said to Ephron in their hearing, "Listen to me, if you will. I will pay the price of the field. Accept it from me so I can bury my dead there."

23:15 <sup>f</sup>Eze 45:12 15 Ephron answered Abraham, <sup>15</sup>"Listen to me, my lord; the land is worth four hundred shekels<sup>c</sup> of silver,<sup>f</sup> but what is that between me and you? Bury your dead."

23:16 <sup>g</sup>Jer 32:9; Zec 11:12 16 Abraham agreed to Ephron's terms and weighed out for him the price he had named in the hearing of the Hittites: four hundred shekels of silver,<sup>g</sup> according to the weight current among the merchants.

23:17 <sup>h</sup>Ge 25:9; 49:30-32; 50:13; Ac 7:16 17 So Ephron's field in Machpelah near Mamre<sup>h</sup>—both the field and the cave in it, and all the trees within the borders of the field—was deeded<sup>18</sup> to Abraham as his property in the presence of all the Hittites who had come to the gate of the city. <sup>19</sup>Afterward Abraham buried his wife Sarah in the cave in the field of Machpelah near Mamre (which is at Hebron) in the land of Canaan. <sup>20</sup>So the field and the cave in it were deeded<sup>i</sup> to Abraham by the Hittites as a burial site.

Isaac and Rebekah

24:1 <sup>i</sup>ver 35 24:1 <sup>j</sup>Ge 39:4-6 <sup>k</sup>ver 9; Ge 47:29 24:2 <sup>m</sup>Ge 14:19 <sup>n</sup>Ge 28:1; Dt 7:3 <sup>o</sup>Ge 10:15-19 24:4 <sup>p</sup>Ge 12:1; 28:2 24 Abraham was now old and well advanced in years, and the LORD had blessed him in every way.<sup>j</sup> <sup>2</sup>He said to the chief<sup>d</sup> servant in his household, the one in charge of all that he had,<sup>k</sup> "Put your hand under my thigh. <sup>3</sup>I want you to swear by the LORD, the God of heaven and the God of earth,<sup>m</sup> that you will not get a wife for my son<sup>n</sup> from the daughters of the Canaanites,<sup>o</sup> among whom I am living, <sup>4</sup>but will go to my country and my own relatives<sup>p</sup> and get a wife for my son Isaac."

23:4 <sup>q</sup>Ge 12:1; 28:2 4 The servant asked him, "What if the woman is unwilling to come back with me to this land? Shall I then take your son back to the country you came from?"

22:20–24 Abraham's brother Nahor (11:26) fathered eight sons by his wife and four by his concubine. They would become the ancestors of 12 Aramean tribes, just as Abraham's son Ishmael would become the ancestor of 12 tribes (17:20; 25:12–16) and his grandson Jacob the ancestor of the 12 tribes of Israel (35:22–26; 49:28). See "Evidence for Serug, Nahor and Terah" on page 22.

23:4 Land suitable for farming was so precious in the ancient world that owners typically refused to sell it outside the family. But Abraham was not trying to buy farmland, only a burial site.

Village cultures used burial chambers (see "The Cave of Machpelah" on p. 38). A family tomb was used by several generations. A body was laid on a shelf along with grave goods (food, pottery, trinkets, weapons, tools). Later the skeletal remains were placed in another chamber or box to accommodate another burial.

23:9 Abraham wanted to buy only a small part of the field because purchasing the entire field would have entailed certain additional financial and social obligations. Hittite laws stipulated that if a property owner sold only part of his property, he (the original and principal landowner) was still required to pay all dues (taxes) on the land. But if he sold the entire tract, the new owner had to pay the dues.

24:2 One of the most frequently used words in Scripture, occurring over 1,600 times, is "hand." Besides its literal use, it occurs in numerous figurative senses as well. To put one's hand under another's thigh as in verses 2, 9 and 48:29 meant to take a solemn oath, evidently related to covenant obligations.

me on oath, saying, “To your offspring<sup>a,q</sup> I will give this land”<sup>r</sup>—he will send his angel before you<sup>s</sup> so that you can get a wife for my son from there.<sup>8</sup> If the woman is unwilling to come back with you, then you will be released from this oath of mine. Only do not take my son back there.”<sup>9</sup> So the servant put his hand under the thigh<sup>t</sup> of his master Abraham and swore an oath to him concerning this matter.

<sup>19</sup>After she had given him a drink, she said, “I’ll draw water for your camels too,<sup>e</sup> until they have finished drinking.”<sup>20</sup> So she quickly emptied her jar into the trough, ran back to the well to draw more water, and drew enough for all his camels.<sup>21</sup> Without saying a word, the man watched her closely to learn whether or not the LORD had made his journey successful.<sup>f</sup>

<sup>22</sup>When the camels had finished drinking, the man took out a gold nose ring<sup>g</sup> weighing a beka<sup>h</sup> and two gold bracelets weighing ten shekels.<sup>d</sup> <sup>23</sup>Then he asked, “Whose daughter are you? Please tell me, is there room in your father’s house for us to spend the night?”

<sup>24</sup>She answered him, “I am the daughter of Bethuel, the son that Milcah bore to Nahor.<sup>h</sup>”<sup>25</sup> And she added, “We have plenty of straw and fodder, as well as room for you to spend the night.”

<sup>28</sup>The girl ran and told her mother’s household about these things.<sup>29</sup> Now Rebekah had a brother named Laban,<sup>n</sup> and he hurried out to the man at the spring.<sup>30</sup> As soon as he had seen the nose ring, and the bracelets on his sister’s arms, and had heard Rebekah tell what the man said to her, he went out to the man and found him standing by the camels near the spring.<sup>31</sup> “Come, you who are blessed by the LORD,”<sup>o</sup> he said. “Why are you standing out here? I have prepared the house and a place for the camels.”

<sup>32</sup>So the man went to the house, and the camels were unloaded. Straw and fodder were brought for the camels, and water for him and his men to wash their feet.<sup>p</sup> <sup>33</sup>Then food was set before him, but he said, “I will not eat until I have told you what I have to say.”

“Then tell us,” Laban<sup>q</sup> said.

<sup>34</sup>So he said, “I am Abraham’s servant.<sup>35</sup> The LORD has blessed my master abundantly,<sup>q</sup> and he has become wealthy. He has given him sheep and cattle, silver and gold, menservants and maidservants, and camels and donkeys.<sup>r</sup> <sup>36</sup>My master’s wife Sarah has borne him a son in her<sup>e</sup> old age,<sup>s</sup> and he has given him everything he owns.<sup>t</sup> <sup>37</sup>And my master made me swear an oath, and said, ‘You must not get a wife for my son from the daughters of the Canaanites, in whose land I live,<sup>u</sup> <sup>38</sup>but go to my father’s family and to my own clan, and get a wife for my son.’<sup>v</sup>

Perhaps named after Abraham’s brother (see v. 15; 11:26), the town of Nahor is mentioned in clay tablets excavated by the French beginning in 1933 at the ancient city of Mari on the Euphrates River. Nahor was located in the Haran district and was ruled by an Amorite prince in the eighteenth century B.C. See “Evidence for Serug, Nahor and Terah” on page 22, “Haran” on page 47 and “Mari” on page 54.

A camel (see “Camels” on p. 41) that has gone a few days without water can drink as much as 25 gallons (23.7 l; up to 100 drawings from the well for all the servant’s camels). It is evident that Abraham’s servant intentionally selected an extreme action as a sign to avoid any doubt that God was controlling the situation.

CULTURAL AND HISTORICAL NOTES

Camels

GENESIS 24 The first Biblical references to domesticated camels occur in the stories of Abraham. He owned them (Ge 12:16), and his servant used them as pack animals (24:10). Camels are also mentioned in the stories of Jacob (30:43; 31:34; 32:15) and Joseph (37:25) and were found among the Amalekites, Ishmaelites and Midianites.<sup>1</sup>

Scholars have debated the historicity of these references to camels because most believe that these animals were not widely domesticated until approximately 1200 B.C., long after the time of Abraham. Arguments in support of later domestication of the camel include:

Neither the Mari tablets from the eighteenth century B.C. nor the fourteenth-century B.C. Amarna correspondence mentions domesticated camels.<sup>2</sup>

During the patriarchal period the donkey appears to have been the animal primarily used for transport. For example, the “Beni Hasan painting,” which depicts Semites bringing goods to Egypt during the Twelfth Dynasty (1900 B.C.), pictures donkeys rather than camels being used in caravans.<sup>3</sup>

On the other hand, we do see clear evidence of camel domestication in the first millennium, much later than the time of the patriarchs. For example, Assyrian wall relief artwork depicts men riding camels into war.

Other evidence does suggest that at least some camels were domesticated earlier. Bone fragments and other archaeological remains have led some scholars to postulate a third millennium date for camel domestication. Although many scholars regard this evidence as inconclusive because it is difficult to distinguish wild from domesticated animals using only bone samples, other evidence, as described below, suggests that people were relying on camels in some manner:

✦ A braided cord of camel hair from pre-dynastic Egypt has been discovered.

✦ A Sumerian text refers to camel’s milk.

✦ An Old Babylonian text from the early second-millennium Ugarit describes the camel as a domestic animal.

Thus, the evidence does not force us to regard the appearance of domesticated camels in Genesis as anachronistic. Such tamed animals probably were rare during the second millennium, however, and may have been owned almost exclusively by wealthy people.

The Death of Abraham

25 Abraham took<sup>c</sup> another wife, whose name was Keturah.<sup>2</sup> She bore him Zimran, Jokshan, Medan, Midian, Ishbak and Shuah.<sup>a</sup> <sup>3</sup>Jokshan was the father of Sheba and Dedan; the descendants of Dedan were the Asshurites, the Letushites and the Leummmites. <sup>4</sup>The sons of Midian were Ephah, Epher, Hanoch, Abida and Eldaah. All these were descendants of Keturah.

Isaac was Abraham’s firstborn son according to law. See “Custom and Law in Ancient Mesopotamia” on page 36, “The Rights of the Firstborn” on page 43 and “Nuzi” on page 52.

He breathed his last and died, and he was gathered to his people.<sup>n</sup> <sup>18</sup>His descendants settled in the area from Havilah to Shur, near the border of Egypt, as you go toward Asshur. And they lived in hostility toward<sup>b</sup> all their brothers.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>a</sup> 10 Or the sons of Heth    <sup>b</sup> 18 Or lived to the east of illicit lover but a woman lawfully united in marriage to a man in a relationship inferior to that of a regular wife. No moral stigma was attached to this status, which was considered a natural part of a polygamous social system. Concubines enjoyed no other right than that of lawful cohabitation. They exercised no authority within the family or in household affairs, and their husbands could send them away at any time with a small present. Their children as well, by means of small presents, could be excluded from the family heritage (v. 6), even though they were regarded as legitimate. In patriarchal times, at least, the immediate cause of concubinage was often the barrenness of the lawful wife, who would herself suggest that her husband have children by her maidservant (chs. 16; 30).

25:12–18 Many of the names of Ishmael's sons are Arabic, giving credence to the Arab tradition that Ishmael was their ancestor.

The Rights of the Firstborn

GENESIS 25 The Hebrew term bet av ("paternal household") reflects the fact that in ancient Israel the family was patrilineal: Inheritances were passed through the male line. The patriarch had authority over the entire household, including sons, daughters-in-law, unmarried daughters and grandchildren.<sup>1</sup> Upon the patriarch's death the firstborn son became the new head of the family, and the paternal lineage of the extended family continued through him. This firstborn son, therefore, exercised both special privileges and unique responsibilities.

Several Biblical texts stipulate that the firstborn belonged to the Lord and needed to be redeemed (since all firstborn sons belonged to God after the plague on the firstborn in Egypt, Israelites had to symbolically buy them back with animal sacrifices, according to Ex 13:2, 12–16; 22:29; Nu 3:13). The firstborn took precedence over his younger brothers (Ge 43:33) and received a double portion of the inheritance,<sup>2</sup> as well as a special blessing (ch. 27; 48:14ff.).

The patriarch/father was not free to arbitrarily assign the first son's birthright to a younger sibling (Dt 21:15–17), although the birthright could pass to another son in exceptional circumstances (e.g., Reuben lost his birthright because he had defiled his father's bed; cf. 1Ch 5:1–2). Documents from Nuzi and Mari<sup>3</sup> reveal that if a concubine bore the first son, his birthright could be withdrawn if the primary wife subsequently gave birth to a son. This occurred in the case of Ishmael and Isaac.<sup>4</sup>

We also have access to Nuzi documents called "tablet of brotherhood" contracts. These concern the sale of a birthright to someone outside the family (based on a legal loophole of adopting the outsider as a family member) for the purpose of transferring property. Although not identical in concept to what we see in Genesis 25:27 and following, these Nuzi texts do indicate that the birthright could be sold or traded and provide some precedent for Esau's sale of his birthright to Jacob.

The concept underlying the rights of the firstborn son has theological implications. The nation of Israel enjoyed a special relationship with the Lord as his firstborn (Ex 4:22ff.). But Psalm 89:27 indicates that Christ is the Lord's firstborn. This is not to be seen as a contradiction. Believers who are in Christ share in the privileges his intimate relationship with the Father entails (Heb 12:23–24), and we are warned not to spurn or devalue our birthright as Esau did (Heb 12:16–17).

Jacob and Esau

<sup>19</sup>This is the account of Abraham's son Isaac.

Abraham became the father of Isaac, <sup>20</sup>and Isaac was forty years old<sup>b</sup> when he married Rebekah<sup>a</sup> daughter of Bethuel the Aramean from Paddan Aram<sup>a</sup> and sister of Laban<sup>r</sup> the Aramean.

<sup>23</sup>The LORD said to her,

"Two nations<sup>u</sup> are in your womb, and two peoples from within you will be separated;
one people will be stronger than the other,
and the older will serve the younger."<sup>v</sup>

<sup>29</sup>Once when Jacob was cooking some stew, Esau came in from the open country, famished. <sup>30</sup>He said to Jacob, "Quick, let me have some of that red stew! I'm famished!" (That is why he was also called Edom.<sup>d</sup>)

<sup>32</sup>"Look, I am about to die," Esau said. "What good is the birthright to me?"

<sup>33</sup>But Jacob said, "Swear to me first." So he swore an oath to him, selling his birthright<sup>e</sup> to Jacob.

<sup>34</sup>Then Jacob gave Esau some bread and some lentil stew. He ate and drank, and then got up and left. So Esau despised his birthright.

Isaac and Abimelech

26 Now there was a famine in the land<sup>d</sup>—besides the earlier famine of Abraham's time—and Isaac went to Abimelech king of the Philistines in Gerar.<sup>e</sup> <sup>2</sup>The LORD appeared<sup>f</sup> to Isaac and said, "Do not go down to Egypt; live in the land where I tell you to live. <sup>3</sup>Stay in this land for a while,<sup>h</sup> and I will be with you and will bless you. <sup>4</sup>For to you and your descendants I will give all these lands<sup>j</sup> and will confirm the oath I swore to your father Abraham. <sup>4</sup>I will make your descendants as numerous as the stars in the sky<sup>k</sup> and will give them all these lands, and through your offspring<sup>e</sup> all nations on earth will be blessed,<sup>l</sup> because Abraham obeyed me<sup>m</sup> and kept my requirements, my commands, my decrees and my laws."<sup>n</sup> So Isaac stayed in Gerar.

<sup>7</sup>When the men of that place asked him about his wife, he said, "She is my sister,<sup>n</sup>" because he was afraid to say, "She is my wife." He thought, "The men of this place might kill me on account of Rebekah, because she is beautiful."

<sup>8</sup>When Isaac had been there a long time, Abimelech king of the Philistines looked down from a window and saw Isaac caressing his wife Rebekah. <sup>9</sup>So Abimelech summoned Isaac and said, "She is really your wife! Why did you say, 'She is my sister'?"

Isaac answered him, "Because I thought I might lose my life on account of her."

25:23 The ancient law of primogeniture (see note on v. 5) also provided that, under ordinary circumstances, the younger of two sons would be subservient to the older. See also the note on verse 5. 25:26 Jacob's name was an old one among the Semitic people. As early as 2000 B.C., it occurs among writings of Hammurabi as Yak-ibula. That it was a well-known name among the Canaanites of pre-Abrahamic days is attested by records in the temple at Karnak. The name of a city captured by Thutmose III is similar to the Hebrew word: Jakob-el.

25:31 The birthright was the oldest son's share of the family's estate. In the ancient world the firstborn typically received a double share of the inheritance (see the note on v. 5). See "Custom and Law in Ancient Mesopotamia" on page 36, "The Rights of the Firstborn" on page 43 and "Nuzi" on page 52.

25:34 A lentil is a small, pea-like, annual plant that grows well even in nutrient-poor soil. Its pods turn reddish-brown when boiled. It has provided an important source of nourishment in the Near East since ancient times (see 2Sa 17:28; 23:11; Eze 4:9).

26:10 <sup>a</sup>Ge 20:9

<sup>10</sup>Then Abimelech said, “What is this you have done to us?<sup>a</sup> One of the men might well have slept with your wife, and you would have brought guilt upon us.”

ANCIENT TEXTS AND ARTIFACTS

The Tale of Appu’s Two Sons

GENESIS 26 In many respects the Neo-Hittite Tale of Appu’s Two Sons is similar to the Biblical story of Isaac’s twins, Jacob and Esau. Like Isaac (Ge 25:24), Appu, wealthy but aging and childless, prayed for an heir. The sun god granted the request, but Appu named the child Wrong because the gods in his opinion had unjustly withheld a child from him for so long. When Appu’s wife became pregnant a second time and bore another son, he named the infant Right, implying that the gods had acted fairly this time.

When the boys had matured, Wrong attempted to defraud Right of his legitimate portion of the estate by giving him the sick livestock and keeping the healthy animals for himself. Upon perceiving Wrong’s actions, the sun god summoned the brothers before him for judgment, awarding the legal settlement to the younger.

In both the Appu and Isaac narratives the younger son emerged the victor. In Appu’s tale the deceptive elder brother was punished but his honest younger sibling appropriately rewarded. In the Genesis account the younger brother was the deceptive one, but he nevertheless came away with both the birthright and the blessing because, despite his character flaws, he was God’s chosen.<sup>1</sup>

Although Jacob and Esau reconciled years later, Genesis 27 clearly demonstrates that God’s choice was not based on any merit Jacob had to offer but solely upon God’s plan for his people. The Tale of Appu’s Two Sons appears to have been a kind of morality play, as indicated by the sons’ artificial names. In contrast, the Biblical story of Isaac and his sons is historically true and strangely counterintuitive. Similarly, a first-time reader would not expect the saga of Jacob and Esau to turn out as it does; indeed, it reveals a surprising look at our God, whose unexpected and seemingly “upside-down” value system continues to amaze us anew.

<sup>32</sup>That day Isaac's servants came and told him about the well they had dug. They said, "We've found water!" <sup>33</sup>He called it Shibah,<sup>a</sup> and to this day the name of the town has been Beersheba.<sup>b1</sup>

Jacob Gets Isaac's Blessing

27 When Isaac was old and his eyes were so weak that he could no longer see,<sup>p</sup> he called for Esau his older son<sup>q</sup> and said to him, "My son."

27:8 <sup>v</sup>ver 13, 43

<sup>9</sup>Go out to the flock and bring me two choice young goats, so I can prepare some tasty food for your father, just the way he likes it. <sup>10</sup>Then take it to your father to eat, so that he may give you his blessing before he dies."

<sup>11</sup>Jacob said to Rebekah his mother, "But my brother Esau is a hairy man,<sup>w</sup> and I'm a man with smooth skin. <sup>12</sup>What if my father touches me?<sup>x</sup> I would appear to be tricking him and would bring down a curse on myself rather than a blessing."

<sup>14</sup>So he went and got them and brought them to his mother, and she prepared some tasty food, just the way his father liked it. <sup>15</sup>Then Rebekah took the best clothes<sup>a</sup> of Esau her older son, which she had in the house, and put them on her younger son Jacob. <sup>16</sup>She also covered his hands and the smooth part of his neck with the goatskins. <sup>17</sup>Then she handed to her son Jacob the tasty food and the bread she had made.

<sup>21</sup>Then Isaac said to Jacob, "Come near so I can touch you,<sup>d</sup> my son, to know whether you really are my son Esau or not."

27:21 <sup>d</sup>ver 12

<sup>22</sup>Jacob went close to his father Isaac, who touched him and said, "The voice is the voice of Jacob, but the hands are the hands of Esau."<sup>e</sup> <sup>23</sup>He did not recognize him, for his hands were hairy like those of his brother Esau;<sup>e</sup> so he blessed him. <sup>24</sup>"Are you really my son Esau?" he asked.

<sup>30</sup>After Isaac finished blessing him and Jacob had scarcely left his father's presence, his brother Esau came in from hunting. <sup>31</sup>He too prepared some tasty food and brought it to his father. Then he said to him, "My father, sit up and eat some of my game, so that you may give me your blessing."<sup>p</sup>

<sup>32</sup>His father Isaac asked him, "Who are you?"<sup>q</sup>
 "I am your son," he answered, "your firstborn, Esau."

<sup>33</sup>Isaac trembled violently and said, "Who was it, then, that hunted game and brought it to me? I ate it just before you came and I blessed him—and indeed he will be blessed!"<sup>r</sup>

<sup>34</sup>When Esau heard his father's words, he burst out with a loud and bitter cry<sup>s</sup> and said to his father, "Bless me—me too, my father!"

<sup>35</sup>But he said, "Your brother came deceitfully<sup>t</sup> and took your blessing."

<sup>36</sup>Esau said, "Isn't he rightly named Jacob<sup>u</sup>? He has deceived me these two times: He took my birth-right,<sup>v</sup> and now he's taken my blessing!" Then he asked, "Haven't you reserved any blessing for me?"

<sup>37</sup>Isaac answered Esau, "I have made him lord over you and have made all his relatives his servants, and I have sustained him with grain and new wine.<sup>w</sup> So what can I possibly do for you, my son?"

27:33 Peoples of the ancient world believed that blessings and curses had a kind of magical power to accomplish what they pronounced (see "Curses and Imprecations" on p. 883. But Isaac, as heir and steward of God's covenant blessing, acknowledged that he had solemnly transmitted that heritage to Jacob by way of a legally binding bequest (see the note on v. 4). See "The Rights of the Firstborn" on page 43 and "The Tale of Appu's Two Sons" on page 45.

HARAN

GENESIS 27 The ancient city of Haran ("Map 1"), which probably derived its name from the Akkadian word harranu ("highway"), is located in modern-day Turkey about 10 miles (16 km) north of the Syrian border. Strategically situated on the historic east-west trade route that linked the Tigris, River with the Mediterranean Sea, Haran was one of northern Mesopotamia's important commercial and religious centers, widely known for its dedicated worship of the moon god, Sin.

Occupied from the mid-third millennium B.C. until several centuries after the New Testament period, this city is best known for its links with the Biblical patriarchs, who lived during the Middle Bronze

Age (first half of the second millennium B.C.). Mari texts attest that Haran was thriving<sup>1</sup> during this time. En route to Canaan<sup>2</sup> Abram and his family lived there for a time, perhaps to care for Terah, Abram's ailing father who eventually died there (Ge 11:31–32).<sup>3</sup> Abram (now Abraham) later found a wife for his son Isaac from among relatives in Haran (cf. 24:1–7, 24), and Isaac's son Jacob eventually secured refuge in the region with his uncle Laban (27:42—28:5), for whom he worked for 20 years. Before returning to Canaan Jacob married both Leah and Rachel (Laban's two daughters) and fathered 11 sons in Haran (chs. 29–31).

For approximately one thousand years after the patriarchs, Haran continued to flourish on the basis of its trade with other nations and activities related to the moon god, Sin. Following a civic revolt, Assyrian forces captured the city in 763 B.C. Assyrian officials later used this victory to intimidate the Judean king Hezekiah, after which Assyria destroyed the northern kingdom of Israel (Isa 37:11–12). Haran became the last capital of Assyria in 612 B.C. but was captured in 609 B.C. by the Babylonians, who revived the declining worship of Sin and restored Haran as a thriving trade center (cf. Eze 27:23).

Jacob Flees to Laban

<sup>41</sup>Esau held a grudge<sup>c</sup> against Jacob<sup>d</sup> because of the blessing his father had given him. He said to himself, “The days of mourning<sup>e</sup> for my father are near; then I will kill my brother Jacob.”<sup>f</sup>

27:45 Because the nostrils quiver in anger, the word for nostril is rendered in 171 Old Testament instances as “anger,” almost akin to “snorting.” This applies not only to Esau (v. 45) but also to Moses (Ex 32:19) and even to the Lord (Nu 11:1,10). A tempestuous wind is described poetically in the Old Testament as “the blast of [God’s] nostrils” (Ex 15:8; cf. 2Sa 22:16).

PADDAN ARAM

GENESIS 28 The geographical name Paddan Aram has been found only in Genesis (e.g., 28:2), and its meaning and exact location are uncertain. Many scholars believe that Paddan Aram is an alternate name for Aram Naharaim (“Aram of the two rivers”; 24:10), the northern region of the Euphrates River, in the vicinity of Haran, which figures prominently in Genesis as the patriarchs’ ancestral home<sup>1</sup> (“Map 1”).

The prophet Hosea referred to Jacob’s journey to the “country [or field] of Aram” (Hos 12:12). Some scholars believe this phrase to be Hosea’s translation of Paddan Aram, based upon the facts that a Ugaritic text refers to “fields of Aram” and that an Arabic noun, paddan, sometimes means “field.” This argument remains, however, inconclusive.

Others suggest that Paddan means “road,” based on the similar Akkadian word paddanu (“highway”). Thus Paddan Aram would mean “road of Aram.” A synonym of paddanu is the word harranu, which may have been the source of Haran, the city from which Abram departed for Canaan<sup>2</sup> (see Ge 12:4–5). Understood in this light, Paddan Aram would in fact be an alternative name for Haran. Although uncertainty about the name remains, scholars are confident that Paddan Aram refers either to the region around Haran or to Haran itself.

<sup>6</sup>Now Esau learned that Isaac had blessed Jacob and had sent him to Paddan Aram to take a wife from there, and that when he blessed him he commanded him, “Do not marry a Canaanite woman,”<sup>u</sup><sup>7</sup> and that Jacob had obeyed his father and mother and had gone to Paddan Aram.<sup>8</sup> Esau then realized how displeasing the Canaanite women<sup>v</sup> were to his father Isaac;<sup>w</sup><sup>9</sup> so he went to Ishmael and married Mahalath, the sister of Nebaioth<sup>x</sup> and daughter of Ishmael son of Abraham, in addition to the wives he already had.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>10</sup>Jacob left Beersheba and set out for Haran.<sup>z</sup> <sup>11</sup>When he reached a certain place, he stopped for the night because the sun had set. Taking one of the stones there, he put it under his head and lay down to sleep.<sup>12</sup> He had a dream<sup>a</sup> in which he saw a stairway<sup>a</sup> resting on the earth, with its top reaching to heaven, and the angels of God were ascending and descending on it.<sup>b</sup> <sup>13</sup>There above it<sup>b</sup> stood the LORD,<sup>c</sup> and he said: “I am the LORD, the God of your father Abraham and the God of Isaac.<sup>d</sup> I will give you and your descendants the land<sup>e</sup> on which you are lying.<sup>14</sup> Your descendants will be like the dust of the earth, and you<sup>f</sup> will spread out to the west and to the east, to the north and to the south.<sup>g</sup> All peoples on earth will be blessed through you and your offspring.<sup>h</sup> <sup>15</sup>I am with you<sup>i</sup> and will watch over you<sup>i</sup> wherever you go, and I will bring you back to this land. I will not leave you<sup>k</sup> until I have done what I have promised you.”<sup>1</sup>

<sup>16</sup>When Jacob awoke from his sleep, he thought, “Surely the LORD is in this place, and I was not aware of it.”<sup>17</sup> He was afraid and said, “How awesome is this place!<sup>m</sup> This is none other than the house of God; this is the gate of heaven.”

<sup>20</sup>Then Jacob made a vow,<sup>q</sup> saying, “If God will be with me and will watch over me<sup>f</sup> on this journey I am taking and will give me food to eat and clothes to wear<sup>21</sup> so that I return safely<sup>s</sup> to my father’s house, then the LORD<sup>d</sup> will be my God<sup>t</sup> <sup>22</sup>and<sup>e</sup> this stone that I have set up as a pillar will be God’s house,<sup>u</sup> and of all that you give me I will give you a tenth.”<sup>v</sup>

Jacob Arrives in Paddan Aram

29:1 <sup>w</sup>Jdg 6:3,33

29 Then Jacob continued on his journey and came to the land of the eastern peoples.<sup>w</sup> <sup>2</sup>There he saw a well in the field, with three flocks of sheep lying near it because the flocks were watered from that well. The stone over the mouth of the well was large.<sup>3</sup> When all the flocks were gathered there, the shepherds would roll the stone away from the well’s mouth and water the sheep. Then they would return the stone to its place over the mouth of the well.

29:4 <sup>x</sup>Ge 28:10

“We’re from Haran,<sup>x</sup>” they replied.

<sup>5</sup>He said to them, “Do you know Laban, Nahor’s grandson?”

“Yes, we know him,” they answered.

<sup>6</sup>Then Jacob asked them, “Is he well?”

“Yes, he is,” they said, “and here comes his daughter Rachel with the sheep.”

<sup>7</sup>“Look,” he said, “the sun is still high; it is not time for the flocks to be gathered. Water the sheep and take them back to pasture.”

<sup>8</sup>“We can’t,” they replied, “until all the flocks are gathered and the stone has been rolled away from the mouth of the well. Then we will water the sheep.”

28:11 In ancient times people were accustomed to sleeping on the ground. Their headrests were often quite hard and were sometimes made of metal.

28:12 This “stairway” was probably not a ladder with rungs but was more likely similar to the steps mounting the sloping side of a ziggurat (see the note on 11:4).

28:18 In ancient times memorials of worship or of communion with God were common.

<sup>10</sup>When Jacob saw Rachel daughter of Laban, his mother's brother, and Laban's sheep, he went over and rolled the stone away from the mouth of the well and watered his uncle's sheep.<sup>z</sup> <sup>11</sup>Then Jacob kissed Rachel and began to weep aloud.<sup>a</sup> <sup>12</sup>He had told Rachel that he was a relative<sup>b</sup> of her father and a son of Rebekah. So she ran and told her father.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>13</sup>As soon as Laban<sup>d</sup> heard the news about Jacob, his sister's son, he hurried to meet him. He embraced him and kissed him and brought him to his home, and there Jacob told him all these things.

Jacob Marries Leah and Rachel

After Jacob had stayed with him for a whole month, <sup>15</sup>Laban said to him, "Just because you are a relative of mine, should you work for me for nothing? Tell me what your wages should be."

<sup>16</sup>Now Laban had two daughters; the name of the older was Leah, and the name of the younger was Rachel. <sup>17</sup>Leah had weak<sup>a</sup> eyes, but Rachel was lovely in form, and beautiful. <sup>18</sup>Jacob was in love with Rachel and said, "I'll work for you seven years in return for your younger daughter Rachel."<sup>f</sup>

<sup>19</sup>Laban said, "It's better that I give her to you than to some other man. Stay here with me."<sup>g</sup> So Jacob served seven years to get Rachel, but they seemed like only a few days to him because of his love for her.<sup>g</sup>

<sup>21</sup>Then Jacob said to Laban, "Give me my wife. My time is completed, and I want to lie with her."<sup>h</sup>

<sup>25</sup>When morning came, there was Leah! So Jacob said to Laban, "What is this you have done to me? I served you for Rachel, didn't I? Why have you deceived me?"<sup>k</sup>

<sup>26</sup>Laban replied, "It is not our custom here to give the younger daughter in marriage before the older one. <sup>27</sup>Finish this daughter's bridal week;<sup>j</sup> then we will give you the younger one also, in return for another seven years of work."

<sup>28</sup>And Jacob did so. He finished the week with Leah, and then Laban gave him his daughter Rachel to be his wife. <sup>29</sup>Laban gave his servant girl Bilhah<sup>m</sup> to his daughter Rachel as her maidservant.<sup>n</sup> <sup>30</sup>Jacob lay with Rachel also, and he loved Rachel more than Leah.<sup>o</sup> And he worked for Laban another seven years.<sup>p</sup>

Jacob's Children

<sup>3</sup>Then she said, "Here is Bilhah, my maidservant. Sleep with her so that she can bear children for me and that through her I too can build a family."<sup>a</sup>

<sup>4</sup>So she gave him her servant Bilhah as a wife.<sup>b</sup> Jacob slept with her,<sup>c</sup> and she became pregnant and bore him a son. <sup>6</sup>Then Rachel said, "God has vindicated me;<sup>d</sup> he has listened to my plea and given me a son." And they bore young that were streaked or speckled or spotted.<sup>40</sup> Jacob set apart the young of the flock by themselves, but made the rest face the streaked and dark-colored animals that belonged to Laban. Thus he made separate flocks for himself and did not put them with Laban's animals.<sup>41</sup> Whenever the stronger females were in heat, Jacob would place the branches in the troughs in front of the animals so they would mate near the branches,<sup>42</sup> but if the animals were weak, he would not place them there. So the weak animals went to Laban and the strong ones to Jacob.<sup>43</sup> In this way the man grew exceedingly prosperous and came to own large flocks, and maidservants and menservants, and camels and donkeys.<sup>9</sup>

NUZI

GENESIS 30 The ancient city of Nuzi (modern Yorghana Tepe; find Nuzi on “Map 1”), located a few miles southwest of Kirkuk in Iraq, has provided archaeologists with a wealth of material. Estates of the nobility have yielded exquisite wall paintings, figurines, cylinder seals<sup>1</sup> and ceramics in a style dubbed “Nuzi ware.” The most significant discovery to date, however, has been extensive archives dating to approximately 1500–1350 B.C., during which the Mitanni kingdom controlled Nuzi. Most of the 3,500 tablets in these archives originated from private homes and document the lives of the city’s ruling families, as well as providing information regarding the political structure and social conditions of this region and time.

Several Nuzi texts parallel and illuminate Biblical accounts of the patriarchs. Not all of the alleged correspondences between the Bible and information gleaned from Nuzi are certain, but at the very least they demonstrate that the context of Genesis is in fact rooted in ancient customs. Some of the more famous of the proposed congruencies include:

A childless couple in Nuzi could adopt a servant as an heir (cf. Abram’s assumption that his slave, Eliezer, would inherit his estate since Abram had not yet sired a son; 15:2–3).

Legal tablets demonstrate that an infertile primary wife could give her maidservant to her husband for the expressed purpose of providing him an heir, who could subsequently be adopted by the primary wife. According to these texts, if she later gave birth to her own son, he would displace the maidservant’s son, as the rightful heir (cf. the accounts of Sarah and Hagar in 16:1–4; 21:8–10 and of the maidservants of Leah and Rachel in 30:1–13).

Marriage contracts discovered in Nuzi demonstrate that brothers could arrange for their sister’s marriage, although she often had the option to agree or disagree with the proposed union (cf. 24:29–60). Marriage contracts formulated by a father, however, did not require his daughter’s consent (cf. 29:16–30). There are also parallels to the institution of levirate marriage<sup>2</sup> (cf. Judah and Tamar’s story).

Prior to discovery of the Nuzi tablets, scholars had assumed that a later editor had added the notes that Laban gave named maidservants to his daughters when they married (29:22–24, 28–29). But researchers have discovered Nuzi marriage contracts stipulating that the bride was to be given a handmaiden, whose name was duly recorded in the contract.

An individual family’s household idols were considered highly important in Nuzi and were handed down to the principal heir. If the inheritance were disputed in court, possession of the family idols could be accepted as proof that the deceased had intended the possessor to be his heir. Thus, Rachel’s theft of the family idols could have been construed as a serious crime, an attempt to secure Laban’s wealth for her husband and possible future children (31:22–37).

Some historians have argued that Nuzi arrangements allowing a man to adopt a young woman as his daughter for the purpose of giving her in marriage to his son shed light upon Abraham’s two separate protestations that his wife was in reality his sister (12:10–20; 20:1–18). There is some doubt that this is a true parallel, but these incidents at least suggest that the patriarchs’ stories likely had roots in ancient customs of which we may now know little or nothing.

Although the city of Haran (“Map 1”), in which Abraham had lived before journeying to Canaan,<sup>3</sup> is some distance from Nuzi, the Hurrians controlled both cities during the second millennium B.C.<sup>4</sup> Therefore it is not surprising that the Nuzi archives and the Biblical stories of the patriarchs reflect common customs and legal arrangements. Future discoveries of relics such as these tablets may shed additional light on some perplexing Biblical issues.<sup>5</sup>

Jacob Flees From Laban

31 Jacob heard that Laban's sons were saying, "Jacob has taken everything our father owned and has gained all this wealth from what belonged to our father."<sup>2</sup> And Jacob noticed that Laban's attitude toward him was not what it had been.

<sup>3</sup>Then the LORD said to Jacob, "Go back<sup>h</sup> to the land of your fathers and to your relatives, and I will be with you."<sup>i</sup>

<sup>4</sup>So Jacob sent word to Rachel and Leah to come out to the fields where his flocks were. <sup>5</sup>He said to them, "I see that your father's attitude toward me is not what it was before, but the God of my father has been with me.<sup>j</sup> <sup>6</sup>You know that I've worked for your father with all my strength,<sup>k</sup> <sup>7</sup>yet your father has cheated me by changing my wages ten times.<sup>l</sup> However, God has not allowed him to harm me.<sup>m</sup> <sup>8</sup>If he said, 'The speckled ones will be your wages,' then all the flocks gave birth to speckled young; and if he said, 'The streaked ones will be your wages,'<sup>n</sup> then all the flocks bore streaked young. <sup>9</sup>So God has taken away your father's livestock and has given them to me.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>10</sup>"In breeding season I once had a dream in which I looked up and saw that the male goats mating with the flock were streaked, speckled or spotted. <sup>11</sup>The angel of God<sup>p</sup> said to me in the dream, 'Jacob.' I answered, 'Here I am.' <sup>12</sup>And he said, 'Look up and see that all the male goats mating with the flock are streaked, speckled or spotted, for I have seen all that Laban has been doing to you.<sup>q</sup> <sup>13</sup>I am the God of Bethel,<sup>r</sup> where you anointed a pillar and where you made a vow to me. Now leave this land at once and go back to your native land.'<sup>s</sup> "

<sup>19</sup>When Laban had gone to shear his sheep, Rachel stole her father's household gods.<sup>w</sup> <sup>20</sup>Moreover, Jacob deceived<sup>x</sup> Laban the Aramean by not telling him he was running away.<sup>y</sup> <sup>21</sup>So he fled with all he had, and crossing the River,<sup>b</sup> he headed for the hill country of Gilead.<sup>z</sup>

Laban Pursues Jacob

<sup>22</sup>On the third day Laban was told that Jacob had fled.<sup>23</sup> Taking his relatives with him, he pursued Jacob for seven days and caught up with him in the hill country of Gilead. <sup>24</sup>Then God came to Laban the Aramean in a dream at night and said to him,<sup>a</sup> "Be careful not to say anything to Jacob, either good or bad."<sup>b</sup>

<sup>25</sup>Jacob had pitched his tent in the hill country of Gilead when Laban overtook him, and Laban and his relatives camped there too. <sup>26</sup>Then Laban said to Jacob, "What have you done? You've deceived me,<sup>c</sup> and you've carried off my daughters like captives in war.<sup>d</sup> <sup>27</sup>Why did you run off secretly and deceive me? Why didn't you tell me, so I could send you away with joy and singing to the music of tambourines<sup>e</sup> and harps?<sup>f</sup> <sup>28</sup>You didn't even let me kiss my grandchildren and my daughters good-by.<sup>g</sup> You have done a foolish thing. <sup>29</sup>I have the power to harm you;<sup>h</sup> but last night the God of your father<sup>i</sup> said to me, 'Be careful not to say anything to Jacob, either good or bad.'<sup>30</sup> Now you have gone off because you longed to return to your father's house. But why did you steal my gods?<sup>j</sup>

31:14–16 In ancient times contracts for marriages were formal business transactions. The groom usually paid the father of the bride the bride price, which was supposed to be held in trust to provide for the wife if she were abandoned or widowed. In this case Jacob had given no bride price, so Laban should have set aside the equivalent of his wages for the women. If their father's house held no economic security for them, Laban's daughters had no reason to stay.

31:19 These "household gods" were small, portable idols, probably images of either ancestors or the patron gods of ancestors, believed to bring prosperity and protection. Such gods had no temples but were likely provided with a shrine area in the home. Rachel may have wanted something tangible to worship on the long journey ahead, a practice referred to much later in the writings of Josephus, a first-century Jewish historian. A family's household idols were considered highly important in Nuzi and were handed down to the principal heir. If the inheritance were disputed in court, possession of the family idols could be accepted as proof that the deceased had intended the possessor to be his heir (see "Nuzi" on p. 52).

31:30–31 It appears that according to Nuzian customs (see "Nuzi" on p. 52), Jacob had become Laban's male heir after Laban had adopted him as his son. Laban had then given Jacob both Leah and her sister Rachel as his wives. After having become prosperous, Jacob took his departure (v. 21). One reason "Laban's attitude toward him was not what it had been" (v. 2) is that Laban by now apparently had sons by birth, who regarded Jacob as an interloper (v. 1). Thus arose the dispute over the right of the possession of the teraphim, the household gods that Rachel concealed in the baggage as she, together with her husband and Jacob's extended family, fled (vv. 30–31). These household deities, about the size of miniature dolls, were regarded as indisputable evidence of the rights and privileges of family ownership and inheritance. Note Laban's indignant query, "But why did you steal my gods?" (v. 30).

<sup>31</sup>Jacob answered Laban, “I was afraid, because I thought you would take your daughters away from me by force. <sup>32</sup>But if you find anyone who has your gods, he shall not live.”<sup>k</sup> In the presence of our relatives, see for yourself whether there is anything of yours here with me; and if so, take it.” Now Jacob did not know that Rachel had stolen the gods.

<sup>33</sup>So Laban went into Jacob’s tent and into Leah’s tent and into the tent of the two maidservants, but he found nothing. After he came out of Leah’s tent, he entered Rachel’s tent. <sup>34</sup>Now Rachel had taken the household gods and put them inside her camel’s saddle and was sitting on them. Laban searched<sup>l</sup> through everything in the tent but found nothing.

<sup>35</sup>Rachel said to her father, “Don’t be angry, my lord, that I cannot stand up in your presence;<sup>m</sup> I’m having my period.” So he searched but could not find the household gods.

<sup>36</sup>Jacob was angry and took Laban to task. “What is my crime?” he asked Laban. “What sin have I committed that you hunt me down? <sup>37</sup>Now that you have searched through all my goods, what have you found that belongs to your household? Put it here in front of your relatives<sup>n</sup> and mine, and let them judge between the two of us.

<sup>38</sup>“I have been with you for twenty years now. Your sheep and goats have not miscarried, nor have I eaten rams from your flocks. <sup>39</sup>I did not bring you animals torn by wild beasts; I bore the loss myself. And you demanded payment from me for whatever was stolen by day or night.<sup>o</sup> <sup>40</sup>This was my situation: The heat consumed me in the daytime and the cold at night, and sleep fled from my eyes. <sup>41</sup>It was like this for the twenty years I was in your household. I worked for you fourteen years for your two daughters<sup>p</sup> and six years for your flocks, and you changed my wages ten times.<sup>q</sup> <sup>42</sup>If the God of my father,<sup>r</sup> the God of Abraham and the Fear of Isaac,<sup>s</sup> had not been with me,<sup>t</sup> you would surely have sent me away empty-handed. But God has seen my hardship and the toil of my hands,<sup>u</sup> and last night he rebuked you.”

MARI

GENESIS 31 Mari (“Map 1”), known today as Tell Hariri, is located on the Euphrates River just downstream from its confluence with the Habur River.<sup>1</sup> Ideally situated at the convergence of several trade routes connecting Sumer to Assyria and Mesopotamia to Syria-Palestine, cosmopolitan Mari was an ideal spot for trade and communications between kingdoms. The city served as a buffer zone between the Sumerian city-states to the southeast and the lands of the pastoral tribes, called Amorites, to the north. These livestock-raising nomads seem to have been particularly concentrated around the city of Haran (cf. Abram’s sojourn there mentioned in Ge 11:31—12:5).<sup>2</sup> Swarming in from Mesopotamia, they settled down there between 2400–2200 B.C. In fact, people from northwestern Syria ruled Mari after this period, so the city’s most famous kings were of Amorite descent.

Much of Mari’s early history is obscure. Founded around 2900–2700 B.C., the city acquired wealth and importance but periodically was controlled by such great third-millennium B.C. powers as Sargon of Akkad and the Third Dynasty of Ur.<sup>3</sup> In 1775 B.C. Zimri-Lim of Mari broke free of Assyrian domination, but Hammurabi of Babylon burned the city in 1761 B.C.

begun in 1933, excavations of Mari have uncovered a large palace and several temples, including a ziggurat. The excavations have also yielded tens of thousands of clay, cuneiform tablets that had become hardened from the heat of conflagrations inflicted by the Babylonians. Well preserved, these tablets address a wide variety of issues, such as palace administration, provincial administration, harems, expenses, gift registries, literary works, letters and treaties.

These Mari documents shed light upon Old Testament study in several ways:

They describe the Amorites and their culture, helping us to understand the broader cultural environment of the early Israelites.

They showcase similarities between many Amorite and Biblical names, although there are few, if any, direct links to specific Biblical characters.

They mention the towns of Laish, which the Danites destroyed and rebuilt (Jdg 18), and Hazor, an important city even before the Israelites entered the promised land (Jos 11:10).<sup>4</sup>

They refer to pagan prophets who functioned in some ways similarly to their Biblical counterparts.<sup>5</sup>

<sup>43</sup>Laban answered Jacob, “The women are my daughters, the children are my children, and the flocks are my flocks. All you see is mine. Yet what can I do today about these daughters of mine, or about the children they have borne? <sup>44</sup>Come now, let’s make a covenant,<sup>v</sup> you and I, and let it serve as a witness between us.”<sup>w</sup>

<sup>45</sup>So Jacob took a stone and set it up as a pillar.<sup>x</sup> <sup>46</sup>He said to his relatives, “Gather some stones.” So they took stones and piled them in a heap, and they ate there by the heap. <sup>47</sup>Laban called it Jegar Sahadutha,<sup>a</sup> and Jacob called it Galeed.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>48</sup>Laban said, “This heap is a witness between you and me today.” That is why it was called Galeed. <sup>49</sup>It was also called Mizpah,<sup>c</sup> <sup>y</sup> because he said, “May the LORD keep watch between you and me when we are away from each other. <sup>50</sup>If you mistreat my daughters or if you take any wives besides my daughters, even though no one is with us, remember that God is a witness<sup>z</sup> between you and me.”

<sup>51</sup>Laban also said to Jacob, “Here is this heap, and here is this pillar<sup>a</sup> I have set up between you and me. <sup>52</sup>This heap is a witness, and this pillar is a witness,<sup>b</sup> that I will not go past this heap to your side to harm you and that you will not go past this heap and pillar to my side to harm me. <sup>c</sup> <sup>53</sup>May the God of Abraham<sup>d</sup> and the God of Nahor, the God of their father, judge between us.”<sup>e</sup>

So Jacob took an oath<sup>f</sup> in the name of the Fear of his father Isaac. <sup>g</sup> <sup>54</sup>He offered a sacrifice there in the hill country and invited his relatives to a meal. After they had eaten, they spent the night there.

32 Jacob also went on his way, and the angels of God<sup>j</sup> met him. <sup>2</sup>When Jacob saw them, he said, “This is the camp of God!”<sup>k</sup> So he named that place Mahanaim.<sup>l</sup>

<sup>3</sup>Jacob sent messengers ahead of him to his brother Esau<sup>m</sup> in the land of Seir, the country of Edom.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>4</sup>He instructed them: “This is what you are to say to my master Esau: ‘Your servant Jacob says, I have been staying with Laban and have remained there till now. <sup>5</sup>I have cattle and donkeys, sheep and goats, menservants and maidservants. <sup>6</sup>Now I am sending this message to my lord, that I may find favor in your eyes.’”<sup>o</sup>

<sup>6</sup>When the messengers returned to Jacob, they said, “We went to your brother Esau, and now he is coming to meet you, and four hundred men are with him.”<sup>q</sup>

<sup>9</sup>Then Jacob prayed, “O God of my father Abraham, God of my father Isaac,<sup>s</sup> O LORD, who said to me, ‘Go back to your country and your relatives, and I will make you prosper,’<sup>t</sup> <sup>10</sup>I am unworthy of all the kindness and faithfulness<sup>u</sup> you have shown your servant. I had only my staff when I crossed this Jordan, but now I have become two groups. <sup>11</sup>Save me, I pray, from the hand of my brother Esau, for I am afraid he will come and attack me,<sup>v</sup> and also the mothers with their children. <sup>w</sup> <sup>12</sup>But you have said, ‘I will surely make you prosper and will make your descendants like the sand<sup>x</sup> of the sea, which cannot be counted.’<sup>y</sup>”

<sup>13</sup>He spent the night there, and from what he had with him he selected a gift<sup>z</sup> for his brother Esau: <sup>14</sup>two hundred female goats and twenty male goats, two hundred ewes and twenty rams, <sup>15</sup>thirty female camels with their young, forty cows and ten bulls, and twenty female donkeys and ten male donkeys. <sup>16</sup>He put them in the care of his servants, each herd by itself, and said to his servants, “Go ahead of me, and keep some space between the herds.”

<sup>17</sup>He instructed the one in the lead: “When my brother Esau meets you and asks, ‘To whom do you belong, and where are you going, and who owns all these animals in front of you?’<sup>18</sup> then you are to say, ‘They belong to your servant<sup>a</sup> Jacob. They are a gift sent to my lord Esau, and he is coming behind us.’”

<sup>19</sup>He also instructed the second, the third and all the others who followed the herds: “You are to say the same thing to Esau when you meet him. <sup>20</sup>And be sure to say, ‘Your servant Jacob is coming behind us.’” For he thought, “I will pacify him with these gifts I am sending on ahead; later, when I see him, perhaps he will receive me.”<sup>b</sup> <sup>21</sup>So Jacob’s gifts went on ahead of him, but he himself spent the night in the camp.

itly stating Laban’s use of Aramaic, calls attention to the fact that he used different wording than Jacob did.

Jacob Wrestles With God

<sup>22</sup>That night Jacob got up and took his two wives, his two maidservants and his eleven sons and crossed the ford of the Jabbok.<sup>c</sup> <sup>23</sup>After he had sent them across the stream, he sent over all his possessions. <sup>24</sup>So Jacob was left alone, and a man<sup>d</sup> wrestled with him till daybreak. <sup>25</sup>When the man saw that he could not overpower him, he touched the socket of Jacob's hip<sup>e</sup> so that his hip was wrenched as he wrestled with the man. <sup>26</sup>Then the man said, "Let me go, for it is daybreak."

But Jacob replied, "I will not let you go unless you bless me."<sup>f</sup>

<sup>27</sup>The man asked him, "What is your name?"

"Jacob," he answered.

<sup>28</sup>Then the man said, "Your name will no longer be Jacob, but Israel,<sup>g</sup> because you have struggled with God and with men and have overcome."

<sup>29</sup>Jacob said, "Please tell me your name."<sup>h</sup>

But he replied, "Why do you ask my name?"<sup>i</sup> Then he blessed<sup>j</sup> him there.

<sup>30</sup>So Jacob called the place Peniel,<sup>b</sup> saying, "It is because I saw God face to face,<sup>k</sup> and yet my life was spared."

Jacob Meets Esau

33 Jacob looked up and there was Esau, coming with his four hundred men;<sup>l</sup> so he divided the children among Leah, Rachel and the two maidservants. <sup>2</sup>He put the maidservants and their children in front, Leah and her children next, and Rachel and Joseph in the rear. <sup>3</sup>He himself went on ahead and bowed down to the ground<sup>m</sup> seven times as he approached his brother.

<sup>4</sup>But Esau ran to meet Jacob and embraced him; he threw his arms around his neck and kissed him.

SUCCOTH/TELL DEIR ALLA

GENESIS 33 Succoth, located just east of the Jordan River, is mentioned in several Biblical contexts (but note that the Succoth of Ex 12–13 and Nu 33 ["Map 1"] was a different place):

After meeting Esau near the Jabbok River, Jacob proceeded toward the Jordan River near Penuel and built livestock enclosures there (Ge 33:17; the rivers, but not the names of these towns, are indicated on "Map 2"). Jacob named this place Succoth ("shelters").

Gideon followed Jacob's route in reverse (Jdg 8) while pursuing Midianite raiders.<sup>1</sup> The people of Succoth refused to feed his troops, and in retaliation they later sacked the town (Jdg 8:13–17).

Most scholars identify Succoth with modern Tell Deir Alla. A significant temple existed here during the Late Bronze Age.<sup>2</sup> Remains discovered at Succoth include jar fragments from 1209–1201 B.C., ornamented with a cartouche of an Egyptian queen, and three clay tablets in a script yet to be deciphered.

The Late Bronze-era Succoth was destroyed around 1200 B.C., possibly by Gideon and his troops. Excavation of Iron Age I strata offers no evidence of a permanent settlement there at that time (with the exception of minor structures dated near the end of this period), but remains do exist of furnaces used to smelt bronze. According to 1 Kings 7:46 Solomon arranged for bronze-casting in the Succoth area for the making of items designated for the temple.

The site was once again built up during the Iron Age II. A plastered wall from this era contains an Aramaic inscription in ink mentioning Balaam.<sup>3</sup> An earthquake probably destroyed the city during the eighth century B.C. (cf. Am 1:1). The site was inhabited, however, until the late Persian period, perhaps only seasonally due to the extreme summer temperatures.

And because Jacob insisted, Esau accepted it.

33:19 Modern Bir Ya'kub is doubtless the well mentioned in John 4:6 as the well of Jacob. For many centuries Samaritans and Jews have believed this to be the case. The ground mentioned by John had been purchased by Jacob (v. 19). The area was later wrested by

The Hurrians

GENESIS 34 The Hurrians entered northern Mesopotamia, apparently from the Caucasus region, during the third millennium B.C. and scattered across the ancient Near East. They were well established in the area by the eighteenth century B.C. and created the kingdom of Mitanni in the northern territory between the Tigris and Euphrates Rivers by the mid-sixteenth century B.C.<sup>1</sup> This kingdom became a major international player during the mid-second millennium B.C., but its location between the areas inhabited by the Egyptians, Hittites and Assyrians rendered it vulnerable to attack. By about 1250 B.C. Mitanni had ceased to exist as a kingdom.

Little is known about the Hurrian language because most of the documents these people left behind are in Akkadian<sup>2</sup> rather than in their own language. It is certain, however, that the Hurrians were not Semitic.

In Nuzi, a Hurrian city east of the Tigris River, archaeologists have discovered an archive of cuneiform texts that reveal much about ancient Mesopotamian culture.<sup>3</sup> The Hurrians worshiped such deities as a storm god, a sun god and a moon god in a Mesopotamian temple/pantheon (temple dedicated to multiple gods). Excelling in metallurgy and glassmaking, they also were known for an intricately decorated pottery now called "Nuzi ware." Some scholars have suggested that the Biblical Horites (Ge 36:20–21; 14:6) were Hurrians, but this is most likely incorrect. The Horites were a late third-millennium tribal group indigenous to the region of Seir, south of the Dead Sea, whereas the Hurrians were a people who entered northern Mesopotamia from the north during the second millennium.

Dinah and the Shechemites

34 Now Dinah,<sup>c</sup> the daughter Leah had borne to Jacob, went out to visit the women of the land.
<sup>2</sup>When Shechem son of Hamor the Hivite, the ruler of that area, saw her, he took her and violated her.
<sup>3</sup>His heart was drawn to Dinah daughter of Jacob, and he loved the girl and spoke tenderly to her.
<sup>4</sup>And Shechem said to his father Hamor, “Get me this girl as my wife.”

<sup>5</sup>When Jacob heard that his daughter Dinah had been defiled, his sons were in the fields with his livestock; so he kept quiet about it until they came home.

<sup>6</sup>Then Shechem’s father Hamor went out to talk with Jacob.<sup>d</sup> <sup>7</sup>Now Jacob’s sons had come in from the fields as soon as they heard what had happened. They were filled with grief and fury, because Shechem had done a disgraceful thing in<sup>a</sup> Israel<sup>e</sup> by lying with Jacob’s daughter—a thing that should not be done.<sup>f</sup>

<sup>8</sup>But Hamor said to them, “My son Shechem has his heart set on your daughter. Please give her to him as his wife.<sup>g</sup> <sup>9</sup>Intermarry with us; give us your daughters and take our daughters for yourselves.<sup>h</sup> <sup>10</sup>You can settle among us;<sup>i</sup> the land is open to you.<sup>j</sup> <sup>11</sup>Live in it, trade<sup>k</sup> in it,<sup>l</sup> and acquire property in it.”

<sup>12</sup>Then Shechem said to Dinah’s father and brothers, “Let me find favor in your eyes, and I will give you whatever you ask.<sup>m</sup> <sup>13</sup>Make the price for the bride<sup>n</sup> and the gift I am to bring as great as you like, and I’ll pay whatever you ask me. Only give me the girl as my wife.”

<sup>27</sup>Three days later, while all of them were still in pain, two of Jacob’s sons, Simeon and Levi, Dinah’s brothers, took their swords<sup>y</sup> and attacked the unsuspecting city, killing every male.<sup>z</sup> <sup>28</sup>They put Hamor and his son Shechem to the sword and took Dinah from Shechem’s house and left. <sup>29</sup>The sons of Jacob came upon the dead bodies and looted the city where<sup>aa</sup> their sister had been defiled. <sup>30</sup>They seized their flocks and herds and donkeys and everything else of theirs in the city and out in the fields. <sup>31</sup>They carried off all their wealth and all their women and children, taking as plunder everything in the houses.

<sup>32</sup>Then Jacob said to Simeon and Levi, “You have brought trouble on me by making me a stench<sup>ab</sup> to the Canaanites and Perizzites, the people living in this land.<sup>ac</sup> <sup>33</sup>We are few in number,<sup>ad</sup> and if they join forces against me and attack me, I and my household will be destroyed.”

<sup>34</sup>But they replied, “Should he have treated our sister like a prostitute?”

Jacob Returns to Bethel

35 Then God said to Jacob, “Go up to Bethel<sup>ae</sup> and settle there, and build an altar there to God, who appeared to you when you were fleeing from your brother Esau.”<sup>af</sup>

<sup>2</sup>So Jacob said to his household<sup>ag</sup> and to all who were with him, “Get rid of the foreign gods<sup>ah</sup> you have with you, and purify yourselves and change your clothes.<sup>ai</sup> <sup>3</sup>Then come, let us go up to Bethel, where I will limestone. The depth of the well has not been determined. For centuries tourists cast pebbles into it, until Greek Catholics purchased the site and put it under guard.

BETHEL

GENESIS 35 The holy site of Bethel (“Map 1”) played an important role in the lives of Abraham and Jacob/Israel, as well as in later Israelite history. Abraham built an altar between Bethel and Ai (Ge 12:8), and Jacob, en route to Haran while fleeing from Esau, experienced a vivid dream at Bethel<sup>1</sup> (28:10–17). Before moving on, he set up a commemorative stone at the spot. In addition to serving as places of remembrance, such stones occasionally marked burial sites (35:20).

Biblical scholars have long debated Bethel’s precise location. Most have placed it at modern Tell Beitin, 8 miles (13 km) north of Jerusalem, but el Bireh, a few miles farther south, has also been suggested. Clearly Bethel was located within the area north of Jerusalem now referred to as the West Bank.

Tell Beitin, which shows signs of occupation beginning with the Chalcolithic period,<sup>2</sup> was continuously occupied during the Middle Bronze Ages I and II, until the city was destroyed around 1550 B.C. A Late Bronze Age city located on the same site, dating from the fourteenth century B.C., boasted high-quality houses, streets with flagstone pavements, and sewers. There is evidence of its destruction at the end of the Bronze Age, and a later, Iron Age I settlement at the location reflects an impoverished community. This city continued to exist through the Iron Age, but no remains of Jeroboam’s temple—which the Babylonian army destroyed in 586 B.C.—have been found here.

According to the Onomasticon, written by Eusebius (A.D. 269–339) and revised by Jerome (A.D. 345–419), Bethel was located at the twelfth Roman milestone on the eastern side of the road leading north to Neapolis (called Shechem in the Old Testament; modern Nablus). In this ancient manuscript Tell Beitin is described as being located at the fourteenth milestone, indicating that, if Eusebius’s information was correct, it could not have been Bethel. Bethel may, then, have been situated a little to the south, at modern el Bireh, near the city of Ramallah. No excavation has been done at el Bireh, a town currently occupied by Palestinians.

During the period of Israel’s monarchy, Bethel (“house of God”) came to be embroiled in a controversy. Associations with its sacred history and monuments led the people to transform it into a center of idolatrous worship.

Jeroboam I, for example, took advantage of the holy traditions associated with Bethel and, against God’s will, set up a shrine there to serve as an alternative worship site to Solomon’s temple<sup>3</sup> (1Ki 12:26–30). As a result the prophets severely censured worship at Bethel. Hosea (Hos 4:15; 5:8; 10:5) went so far as to refer to Bethel as Beth Aven, a disparaging pun meaning “house of wickedness.”<sup>4</sup> Such texts indicate that there was a debate during ancient times over whether Bethel was a sacred site or a center of apostasy.

The name Bethel was at the center of debate in another context. Bethel appears as a god’s name in a seventh-century B.C. Assyrian treaty and in some texts from Elephantine, located in southern Egypt.<sup>5</sup> Based upon these discoveries, some scholars have argued that the word Bethel is used in the Old Testament as a divine name rather than as a place-name. Most interpreters remain unconvinced of the validity of this theory, since it appears quite evident that the Biblical Bethel was a specific place. In fact, certain Biblical texts seem to attest that Bethel in its early days was a city formerly known as Luz (mentioned in Ge 28:19; 35:6; 48:3) but renamed by Jacob (Jdg 1:23).

<sup>9</sup>After Jacob returned from Paddan Aram,<sup>a</sup> God appeared to him again and blessed him.<sup>9</sup> <sup>10</sup>God said to him, “Your name is Jacob,<sup>b</sup> but you will no longer be called Jacob; your name will be Israel.”<sup>c</sup> So he named him Israel.

<sup>11</sup>And God said to him, “I am God Almighty;<sup>d</sup> I be fruitful and increase in number. A nation<sup>j</sup> and a community of nations will come from you, and kings will come from your body.<sup>k</sup> <sup>12</sup>The land I gave to Abraham and Isaac I also give to you, and I will give this land to your descendants after you.”<sup>m</sup> <sup>13</sup>Then God went up from him<sup>n</sup> at the place where he had talked with him.

<sup>14</sup>Jacob set up a stone pillar at the place where God had talked with him, and he poured out a drink offering on it; he also poured oil on it.<sup>o</sup> <sup>15</sup>Jacob called the place where God had talked with him Bethel.<sup>p</sup>

The Deaths of Rachel and Isaac

<sup>16</sup>Then they moved on from Bethel. While they were still some distance from Ephrath, Rachel began to give birth and had great difficulty. <sup>17</sup>And as she was having great difficulty in childbirth, the midwife said to her, “Don’t be afraid, for you have another son.”<sup>q</sup> <sup>18</sup>As she breathed her last—for she was dying—she named her son Ben-Oni.<sup>r</sup> But his father named him Benjamin.<sup>s</sup>

Jacob had twelve sons:

These were the sons of Jacob, who were born to him in Paddan Aram.

<sup>27</sup>Jacob came home to his father Isaac in Mamre,<sup>d</sup> near Kiriath Arba<sup>e</sup> (that is, Hebron), where Abraham and Isaac had stayed. <sup>28</sup>Isaac lived a hundred and eighty years.<sup>f</sup> <sup>29</sup>Then he breathed his last and died and was gathered to his people,<sup>g</sup> old and full of years.<sup>h</sup> And his sons Esau and Jacob buried him.<sup>i</sup>

Esau’s Descendants

35:22 Slaves, servants and concubines were considered part of the inheritance passed along from father to son. The oldest son would inherit with his birthright the human members of the household.

When inheritance was seized prior to a father’s death, the father’s role was usurped (cf. e.g., 49:3–4 with 35:22).

36:8 Seir is another name for Edom (see “Edom” on p. 1467).

<sup>9</sup>This is the account of Esau the father of the Edomites in the hill country of Seir.

Eliphaz, the son of Esau's wife Adah, and Reuel, the son of Esau's wife Basemath.

<sup>11</sup>The sons of Eliphaz:<sup>s</sup>

Nahath, Zerah, Shammah and Mizzah. These were grandsons of Esau's wife Basemath.

<sup>14</sup>The sons of Esau's wife Oholibamah daughter of Anah and granddaughter of Zibeon, whom she bore to Esau:

Jeush, Jalam and Korah.

<sup>15</sup>These were the chiefs<sup>w</sup> among Esau's descendants:

The sons of Eliphaz the firstborn of Esau:

Chiefs Nahath, Zerah, Shammah and Mizzah. These were the chiefs descended from Reuel in Edom; they were grandsons of Esau's wife Basemath.

Chiefs Jeush, Jalam and Korah. These were the chiefs descended from Esau's wife Oholibamah daughter of Anah.

Lotan, Shobal, Zibeon, Anah,<sup>21</sup> Dishon, Ezer and Dishan. These sons of Seir in Edom were Horite chiefs.

Alvan, Manahath, Ebal, Shepho and Onam.

Aiah and Anah. This is the Anah who discovered the hot springs<sup>c</sup> in the desert while he was grazing the donkeys of his father Zibeon.

Hemdan, Eshban, Ithran and Keran.

Bilhan, Zaavan and Akan.

Uz and Aran.

Lotan, Shobal, Zibeon, Anah,<sup>30</sup> Dishon, Ezer and Dishan. These were the Horite chiefs, according to their divisions, in the land of Seir.

37 Jacob lived in the land where his father had stayed,<sup>g</sup> the land of Canaan.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>3</sup>Now Israel loved Joseph more than any of his other sons,<sup>m</sup> because he had been born to him in his old age;<sup>n</sup> and he made a richly ornamented<sup>c</sup> robe<sup>o</sup> for him. <sup>4</sup>When his brothers saw that their father loved him more than any of them, they hated him<sup>p</sup> and could not speak a kind word to him.

<sup>5</sup>Joseph had a dream,<sup>q</sup> and when he told it to his brothers, they hated him all the more. <sup>6</sup>He said to them, "Listen to this dream I had: <sup>7</sup>We were binding sheaves of grain out in the field when suddenly my sheaf rose and stood upright, while your sheaves gathered around mine and bowed down to it."<sup>r</sup>

<sup>8</sup>His brothers said to him, "Do you intend to reign over us? Will you actually rule us?"<sup>s</sup> And they hated him all the more because of his dream and what he had said.

<sup>9</sup>Then he had another dream, and he told it to his brothers. "Listen," he said, "I had another dream, and this time the sun and moon and eleven stars were bowing down to me."

<sup>10</sup>When he told his father as well as his brothers,<sup>t</sup> his father rebuked him and said, "What is this dream you had? Will your mother and I and your brothers actually come and bow down to the ground before you?"<sup>u</sup> <sup>11</sup>His brothers were jealous of him,<sup>v</sup> but his father kept the matter in mind.<sup>w</sup>

Joseph Sold by His Brothers

<sup>12</sup>Now his brothers had gone to graze their father's flocks near Shechem, <sup>13</sup>and Israel said to Joseph, "As you know, your brothers are grazing the flocks near Shechem. Come, I am going to send you to them."

"Very well," he replied.

<sup>14</sup>So he said to him, "Go and see if all is well with your brothers and with the flocks, and bring word back to me." Then he sent him off from the Valley of Hebron.<sup>x</sup>

When Joseph arrived at Shechem, <sup>15</sup>a man found him wandering around in the fields and asked him, "What are you looking for?"

<sup>16</sup>He replied, "I'm looking for my brothers. Can you tell me where they are grazing their flocks?"

<sup>17</sup>"They have moved on from here," the man answered. "I heard them say, 'Let's go to Dothan.'"<sup>y</sup>

So Joseph went after his brothers and found them near Dothan. <sup>18</sup>But they saw him in the distance, and before he reached them, they plotted to kill him.<sup>z</sup>

<sup>21</sup>When Reuben heard this, he tried to rescue him from their hands. "Let's not take his life," he said.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>22</sup>"Don't shed any blood. Throw him into this cistern here in the desert, but don't lay a hand on him." Reuben said this to rescue him from them and take him back to his father.

<sup>23</sup>So when Joseph came to his brothers, they stripped him of his robe—the richly ornamented robe

37:25 The caravan was made up of Midianites and Ishmaelites. Midianites were descendants of Abraham through Keturah, Ishmaelites his descendants through Hagar. The forebears of these two peoples were Jacob's uncles, making these traders second or third cousins to Joseph and his brothers. See "Caravan Trading and Routes in the Ancient Near East" on page 63.

The "balm" was an oil or gum used for its healing properties. The balm of Gilead was especially effective (see Jer 8:22; 46:11). See "Perfumes and Anointing Oils" on page 1746.

CULTURAL AND HISTORICAL NOTES

Caravan Trading and Routes in the Ancient Near East

GENESIS 37 According to Genesis 37 Joseph found his brothers near Dothan<sup>1</sup> (see "Map 1" at the back of this Bible). Overcome by jealousy based on their father's favoritism of this younger brother, they seized him and eventually sold him to a passing caravan of Ishmaelites bound for Egypt. Such a caravan probably was headed toward the "Way of the Sea" (Via Maris), an ancient roadway that began in Egypt, hugged the Mediterranean coast of Canaan as it meandered north, then passed just west of Dothan and on to Megiddo.<sup>2</sup> From there travelers could continue north beyond the coastal areas of Phoenicia or veer to the northeast toward Damascus<sup>3</sup> and on to Mesopotamia. The King's Highway, another great roadway during Old Testament times, allowed people to travel from north to south through the Transjordan and connected Damascus to the Gulf of Aqaba.

During ancient times merchants usually traveled in caravans, seeking protection in numbers on account of the many dangers and the lack of accommodations along the way. Caravans tended to be quite large (a column with three hundred donkeys was not extraordinary) and often included armed guards. Ancient texts from the Assyrians, Egyptians and Hittites<sup>4</sup> often refer to the hardships of travel. Wild animals, including lions, were a source of danger;<sup>5</sup> and a lone merchant transporting his wares was a tempting target for bandits. Extreme weather conditions, from drought to snow, also made travel hazardous.

The Romans' elaborate road system (exemplified by the celebrated Appian Way) did not yet exist during Old Testament times.<sup>6</sup> Roads were unpaved, often little more than dirt tracks from earlier caravans. Indeed, for many years scholars could only surmise the precise locations of these paths, making assumptions from the shape of the terrain and drawing from references to routes found in ancient documents. Recently, however, satellite photography has proven to be a useful tool for locating these beaten paths. Understandably, merchants transported their goods by sea or on navigable rivers whenever possible.

Despite all these difficulties merchants traded over great distances in the ancient Near East; goods found their way to the land of Israel from as far away as India and southern Arabia.

<sup>26</sup>Judah said to his brothers, “What will we gain if we kill our brother and cover up his blood?<sup>9</sup> <sup>27</sup>Come, let’s sell him to the Ishmaelites and not lay our hands on him; after all, he is our brother,<sup>h</sup> our own flesh and blood.” His brothers agreed.

<sup>28</sup>So when the Midianite<sup>i</sup> merchants came by, his brothers pulled Joseph up out of the cistern and sold him for twenty shekels<sup>a</sup> of silver to the Ishmaelites, who took him to Egypt.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>29</sup>When Reuben returned to the cistern and saw that Joseph was not there, he tore his clothes.<sup>k</sup> <sup>30</sup>He went back to his brothers and said, “The boy isn’t there! Where can I turn now?”<sup>l</sup>

<sup>31</sup>Then they got Joseph’s robe,<sup>m</sup> slaughtered a goat and dipped the robe in the blood.<sup>32</sup>They took the ornamental robe back to their father and said, “We found this. Examine it to see whether it is your son’s robe.”

<sup>33</sup>He recognized it and said, “It is my son’s robe! Some ferocious animal<sup>n</sup> has devoured him. Joseph has surely been torn to pieces.”<sup>o</sup>

Judah and Tamar

38 At that time, Judah left his brothers and went down to stay with a man of Adullam named Hiram.<sup>2</sup> There Judah met the daughter of a Canaanite man named Shua.<sup>u</sup> He married her and lay with her; <sup>3</sup>she became pregnant and gave birth to a son, who was named Er.<sup>v</sup> <sup>4</sup>She conceived again and gave birth to a son and named him Onan.<sup>5</sup> She gave birth to still another son and named him Shelah. ## CULTURAL AND HISTORICAL NOTES

Levirate Marriage

GENESIS 38 The “duty . . . as a brother-in-law” mentioned in Genesis 38:8 refers to the social and legal obligations of the levir (Latin for “husband’s brother”) to marry his widowed sister-in-law in the event his brother had died and left her childless.

This otherwise forbidden marriage arrangement (see Lev 18:16; 20:21) secured the inheritance of the deceased husband<sup>1</sup> and perpetuated his name (see Dt 25:6), thus reflecting the common desire among ancient Israelites to maintain a presence in the land after their deaths in the persons of their offspring.

In addition, this arrangement provided “social security” for the childless widow, who was effectively helpless and socially disadvantaged in the ancient Near East.<sup>2</sup> The Hittites and Assyrians also practiced levirate marriage.

In the event the deceased husband had no brothers (Ru 1:10–13), or if they had declined to fulfill their duty (Ge 38), other relatives might elect to assume the responsibility of the levir. It appears that this regulation was more strictly applied during the patriarchal period than it was several centuries later under the Mosaic Law (Dt 25:5–10). This is not surprising, since Genesis 38 narrates a period in Israel’s history when “being fruitful” and “multiplying” were critical to the young nation’s existence. Consequences for a brother-in-law’s failure to fulfill this duty in these early days were severe (e.g., Onan’s death; vv. 8–10). Tamar, in desperation, used her father-in-law to provide a legitimate heir. It is possible that her culture regarded her act as legally justified; by analogy, Hittite law stipulated that should the brother of a deceased man also perish and so be unable to fulfill his duty to the widow, she should marry her late husband’s father.

<sup>8</sup>Then Judah said to Onan, "Lie with your brother's wife and fulfill your duty to her as a brother-in-law to produce offspring for your brother."<sup>x</sup> <sup>9</sup>But Onan knew that the offspring would not be his; so whenever he lay with his brother's wife, he spilled his semen on the ground to keep from producing offspring for his brother. <sup>10</sup>What he did was wicked in the LORD's sight; so he put him to death also.<sup>y</sup>

<sup>11</sup>Judah then said to his daughter-in-law Tamar, "Live as a widow in your father's house until my son Shelah grows up."<sup>z</sup> For he thought, "He may die too, just like his brothers." So Tamar went to live in her father's house.

<sup>12</sup>After a long time Judah's wife, the daughter of Shua, died. When Judah had recovered from his grief, he went up to Timnah,<sup>a</sup> to the men who were shearing his sheep, and his friend Hirah the Adullamite went with him.

<sup>13</sup>When Tamar was told, "Your father-in-law is on his way to Timnah to shear his sheep," <sup>14</sup>she took off her widow's clothes, covered herself with a veil to disguise herself, and then sat down at the entrance to Enaim, which is on the road to Timnah. For she saw that, though Shelah<sup>b</sup> had now grown up, she had not been given to him as his wife.

<sup>15</sup>When Judah saw her, he thought she was a prostitute, for she had covered her face. <sup>16</sup>Not realizing that she was his daughter-in-law,<sup>c</sup> he went over to her by the roadside and said, "Come now, let me sleep with you."

"And what will you give me to sleep with you?" she asked.

<sup>17</sup>"I'll send you a young goat<sup>d</sup> from my flock," he said.

"Will you give me something as a pledge<sup>e</sup> until you send it?" she asked.

<sup>18</sup>He said, "What pledge should I give you?"

<sup>20</sup>Meanwhile Judah sent the young goat by his friend the Adullamite in order to get his pledge back from the woman, but he did not find her. <sup>21</sup>He asked the men who lived there, "Where is the shrine prostitute<sup>h</sup> who was beside the road at Enaim?"

"There hasn't been any shrine prostitute here," they said.

<sup>22</sup>So he went back to Judah and said, "I didn't find her. Besides, the men who lived there said, 'There hasn't been any shrine prostitute here.'"

<sup>23</sup>Then Judah said, "Let her keep what she has, or we will become a laughingstock. After all, I did send her this young goat, but you didn't find her."

<sup>24</sup>About three months later Judah was told, "Your daughter-in-law Tamar is guilty of prostitution, and as a result she is now pregnant."

Judah said, "Bring her out and have her burned to death!"<sup>i</sup>

<sup>25</sup>As she was being brought out, she sent a message to her father-in-law. "I am pregnant by the man who owns these," she said. And she added, "See if you recognize whose seal and cord and staff these are."<sup>j</sup>

38:6–10 If a man died childless, his brother was duty bound to raise heirs to him by his widow (the Levirate law of Dt 25:5; see also "Levirate Marriage" on p. 64). Onan's action and resulting punishment had nothing to do with contraception or masturbation but everything to do with rightful inheritance.

38:11–14 A Hittite law stipulated that when a widow married her late husband's brother and he died, she was to marry his father. This was apparently the procedure Tamar was following. See the note on verses 6–10; see also "Nuzi" on page 52 and "Levirate Marriage" on page 64.

38:17–18 When Tamar accepted as guarantee of payment Jacob's seal, cord and staff, she held symbols of his individual and corporate identity—the equivalent of an I.D. card or signature.

Joseph and Potiphar's Wife

39 Now Joseph had been taken down to Egypt. Potiphar, an Egyptian who was one of Pharaoh's officials, the captain of the guard,<sup>1</sup> bought him from the Ishmaelites who had taken him there.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>2</sup>The LORD was with Joseph<sup>3</sup> and he prospered, and he lived in the house of his Egyptian master.<sup>3</sup> When his master saw that the LORD was with him<sup>4</sup> and that the LORD gave him success in everything he did,<sup>5</sup> <sup>4</sup>Joseph found favor in his eyes and became his attendant. Potiphar put him in charge of his household, and he entrusted to his care everything he owned.<sup>6</sup> <sup>5</sup>From the time he put him in charge of his household and of all that he owned, the LORD blessed the household of the Egyptian because of Joseph.<sup>7</sup> The blessing of the LORD was on everything Potiphar had, both in the house and in the field.<sup>6</sup> So he left in Joseph's care everything he had; with Joseph in charge, he did not concern himself with anything except the food he ate.

Now Joseph was well-built and handsome,<sup>7</sup> and after a while his master's wife took notice of Joseph and said, "Come to bed with me!"<sup>8</sup>

<sup>8</sup>But he refused.<sup>9</sup> "With me in charge," he told her, "my master does not concern himself with anything in the house; everything he owns he has entrusted to my care.<sup>9</sup> No one is greater in this house than I am.<sup>2</sup> My master has withheld nothing from me except you, because you are his wife. How then could I do such a wicked thing and sin against God?"<sup>10</sup> And though she spoke to Joseph day after day, he refused to go to bed with her or even be with her.

<sup>11</sup>One day he went into the house to attend to his duties, and none of the household servants was inside.<sup>12</sup> She caught him by his cloak<sup>11</sup> and said, "Come to bed with me!" But he left his cloak in her hand and ran out of the house.

<sup>13</sup>When she saw that he had left his cloak in her hand and had run out of the house,<sup>14</sup> she called her

ANCIENT TEXTS AND ARTIFACTS

The Two Brothers

GENESIS 39 An Egyptian text called Papyrus D'Orbiney, dating to approximately 1225 B.C., contains a story titled The Two Brothers. Vividly illustrating the fantastic nature of ancient storytelling, this tale is a curious example of a nonbiblical story having striking similarities to a Biblical text.

In this fictional account, Bata lived with and faithfully served his older brother, Anubis. One day Anubis's wife tried to seduce Bata, who rejected her advances. Furious, she accused him of attempted rape, and the enraged Anubis prepared to kill Bata. But Bata, forewarned by a cow, fled in the nick of time. A lake filled with crocodiles magically appeared between the brothers, cutting off Anubis's pursuit. Anubis returned home—and proceeded to kill his wife!

Meanwhile, Bata cut out his own heart and placed it high in a pine tree, an act rendering him nearly immortal. The gods fashioned a beautiful wife for Bata. An immoral woman, however, she entered Pharaoh's harem and divulged to the Egyptians that Bata could be killed by cutting down the pine tree. They followed through, but Anubis, apparently prepared to reconcile with Bata, found his brother's heart and restored him to life.

Bata in turn transformed himself into a bull and carried Anubis to Pharaoh's court, where Bata's alarmed wife persuaded Pharaoh to sacrifice the bull. Its blood caused two trees to sprout. Realizing that Bata still lived, his wife arranged to have the trees cut down, but a splinter flew into her mouth and she became pregnant. She bore a son, whom Pharaoh raised as his crown prince. The boy—Bata himself—in due course became the pharaoh and appointed Anubis to be his viceroy.

Outlandish as this tale may seem to us, many scholars have noted the amazing similarities between it and the Biblical account of Joseph. Obvious parallels include a rivalry between brothers, a false accusation of rape and an ascent to power in Egypt. There is no reason, however, to surmise that the Biblical story may have been derived from this Egyptian tale. The bizarre quality of the Egyptian story contrasts strongly with the factual tone of the historical, Biblical narrative. At the same time, parallels between the stories may not have been accidental.

If composed after the time of Joseph, the Egyptian tale may have been influenced by the Biblical reality.

If the Egyptian story existed prior to the time of Joseph (assuming that Papyrus D'Orbiney was not its earliest iteration), the obvious parallels included in the Joseph narrative may have been intended to signal the fact that the God of Israel could elevate a son of Israel to power, even in an Egyptian context. The argument could be made that the Biblical account shows that Joseph fulfilled even the Egyptian ideal of a hero.

It is impossible, in the final analysis, to speak definitively of literary dependence going in either direction in this instance; there is simply not enough evidence to make an accurate judgment.

For another parallel to a Biblical story, see "The Tale of Appu's Two Sons" on page 45.

household servants. “Look,” she said to them, “this Hebrew has been brought to us to make sport of us! He came in here to sleep with me, but I screamed.<sup>c</sup> <sup>15</sup>When he heard me scream for help, he left his cloak beside me and ran out of the house.”

But while Joseph was there in the prison,<sup>21</sup> the LORD was with him; he showed him kindness and granted him favor in the eyes of the prison warden.<sup>g</sup> <sup>22</sup>So the warden put Joseph in charge of all those held in the prison, and he was made responsible for all that was done there.<sup>h</sup> <sup>23</sup>The warden paid no attention to anything under Joseph’s care, because the LORD was with Joseph and gave him success in whatever he did.<sup>i</sup>

The Cupbearer and the Baker

40 Some time later, the cupbearer<sup>j</sup> and the baker of the king of Egypt offended their master, the king of Egypt. <sup>2</sup>Pharaoh was angry<sup>k</sup> with his two officials, the chief cupbearer and the chief baker, <sup>3</sup>and put them in custody in the house of the captain of the guard,<sup>l</sup> in the same prison where Joseph was confined. <sup>4</sup>The captain of the guard assigned them to Joseph,<sup>m</sup> and he attended them.

After they had been in custody for some time,<sup>5</sup> each of the two men—the cupbearer and the baker of the king of Egypt, who were being held in prison—had a dream the same night, and each dream had a meaning of its own.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>6</sup>When Joseph came to them the next morning, he saw that they were dejected. <sup>7</sup>So he asked Pharaoh’s officials who were in custody with him in his master’s house, “Why are your faces so sad today?”<sup>o</sup>

<sup>8</sup>“We both had dreams,” they answered, “but there is no one to interpret them.”<sup>p</sup>

Then Joseph said to them, “Do not interpretations belong to God?<sup>q</sup> Tell me your dreams.”

<sup>9</sup>So the chief cupbearer told Joseph his dream. He said to him, “In my dream I saw a vine in front of me, <sup>10</sup>and on the vine were three branches. As soon as it budded, it blossomed, and its clusters ripened into grapes. <sup>11</sup>Pharaoh’s cup was in my hand, and I took the grapes, squeezed them into Pharaoh’s cup and put the cup in his hand.”

<sup>12</sup>“This is what it means,” Joseph said to him. “The three branches are three days. <sup>13</sup>Within three days Pharaoh will lift up your head and restore you to your position, and you will put Pharaoh’s cup in his hand, just as you used to do when you were his cupbearer. <sup>14</sup>But when all goes well with you, remember me<sup>s</sup> and show me kindness;<sup>t</sup> mention me to Pharaoh and get me out of this prison. <sup>15</sup>For I was forcibly carried off from the land of the Hebrews,<sup>u</sup> and even here I have done nothing to deserve being put in a dungeon.”

<sup>16</sup>When the chief baker saw that Joseph had given a favorable interpretation, he said to Joseph, “I too had a dream: On my head were three baskets of bread. <sup>17</sup>In the top basket were all kinds of baked goods for Pharaoh, but the birds were eating them out of the basket on my head.”

40:8 In the ancient Near East great significance was given to dreams, and dream interpretations were sought from experts trained in the techniques and methods of the day. Both the Egyptians and the Babylonians compiled “dream books,” which contained sample dreams with a key to their interpretation. These books preserved the data concerning past dreams and interpretations, providing the security of “scientific” documentation. Joseph consulted God, but his interpretation followed the way Egyptian dream literature interpreted comparable symbols. See “Dream Oracles in the Ancient World” on page 741.

40:20 The date of one’s birth is, in a sense, the most important day of one’s life, for without it the individual would not have experienced life in the world. So the celebration of birthdays goes back to very ancient times (cf. Mt 14:6).

Pharaoh's Dreams

41 When two full years had passed, Pharaoh had a dream:<sup>d</sup> He was standing by the Nile,<sup>2</sup> when out of the river there came up seven cows, sleek and fat,<sup>e</sup> and they grazed among the reeds.<sup>f</sup> <sup>3</sup>After them, seven other cows, ugly and gaunt, came up out of the Nile and stood beside those on the riverbank.<sup>4</sup> And the cows that were ugly and gaunt ate up the seven sleek, fat cows. Then Pharaoh woke up.

<sup>5</sup>He fell asleep again and had a second dream: Seven heads of grain, healthy and good, were growing on a single stalk.<sup>6</sup> After them, seven other heads of grain sprouted—thin and scorched by the east wind.<sup>7</sup> The thin heads of grain swallowed up the seven healthy, full heads. Then Pharaoh woke up; it had been a dream.

<sup>9</sup>Then the chief cupbearer said to Pharaoh, “Today I am reminded of my shortcomings. <sup>10</sup>Pharaoh was once angry with his servants,<sup>i</sup> and he imprisoned me and the chief baker in the house of the captain of the guard.<sup>j</sup> <sup>11</sup>Each of us had a dream the same night, and each dream had a meaning of its own.<sup>k</sup> <sup>12</sup>Now a young Hebrew was there with us, a servant of the captain of the guard. We told him our dreams, and he interpreted them for us, giving each man the interpretation of his dream.<sup>l</sup> <sup>13</sup>And things turned out exactly as he interpreted them to us: I was restored to my position, and the other man was hanged.<sup>m</sup>”

<sup>14</sup>So Pharaoh sent for Joseph, and he was quickly brought from the dungeon.<sup>n</sup> When he had shaved and changed his clothes, he came before Pharaoh.

<sup>15</sup>Pharaoh said to Joseph, “I had a dream, and no one can interpret it. But I have heard it said of you that when you hear a dream you can interpret it.”<sup>o</sup>

<sup>16</sup>“I cannot do it,” Joseph replied to Pharaoh, “but God will give Pharaoh the answer he desires.”<sup>p</sup>

<sup>17</sup>Then Pharaoh said to Joseph, “In my dream I was standing on the bank of the Nile,<sup>18</sup> when out of the river there came up seven cows, fat and sleek, and they grazed among the reeds.<sup>19</sup> After them, seven other cows came up—scrawny and very ugly and lean. I had never seen such ugly cows in all the land of Egypt.<sup>20</sup> The lean, ugly cows ate up the seven fat cows that came up first.<sup>21</sup> But even after they ate them, no one could tell that they had done so; they looked just as ugly as before. Then I woke up.

<sup>22</sup>“In my dreams I also saw seven heads of grain, full and good, growing on a single stalk.<sup>23</sup> After them, seven other heads sprouted—withered and thin and scorched by the east wind.<sup>24</sup> The thin heads of grain swallowed up the seven good heads. I told this to the magicians, but none could explain it to me.”<sup>q</sup>

<sup>25</sup>Then Joseph said to Pharaoh, “The dreams of Pharaoh are one and the same. God has revealed to Pharaoh what he is about to do.<sup>r</sup> <sup>26</sup>The seven good cows<sup>s</sup> are seven years, and the seven good heads of grain are seven years; it is one and the same dream.<sup>27</sup> The seven lean, ugly cows that came up afterward are seven years, and so are the seven worthless heads of grain scorched by the east wind: They are seven years of famine.<sup>t</sup>

<sup>28</sup>“It is just as I said to Pharaoh: God has shown Pharaoh what he is about to do.<sup>29</sup> Seven years of great abundance<sup>u</sup> are coming throughout the land of Egypt,<sup>30</sup> but seven years of famine<sup>v</sup> will follow them. Then all the abundance in Egypt will be forgotten, and the famine will ravage the land.<sup>w</sup> <sup>31</sup>The abundance in the land will not be remembered, because the famine that follows it will be so severe.<sup>32</sup> The reason the dream was given to Pharaoh in two forms is that the matter has been firmly decided<sup>x</sup> by God, and God will do it soon.

41:14 Egyptians were normally smooth-shaven, while Hebrews/Israelites wore beards (see 2Sa 10:5; Jer 41:5). See “Beards and Hair-styles in the Biblical World” on page 1084.

41:30 The Nile was the lifeline of Egypt; its annual flooding provided essential water and produced the only fertile soil there. Long famines were therefore rare in Egypt, but not uncommon elsewhere. See “Famine in the Ancient Near East” on page 70.

<sup>39</sup>Then Pharaoh said to Joseph, “Since God has made all this known to you, there is no one so discerning and wise as you. <sup>40</sup>You shall be in charge of my palace, and all my people are to submit to your orders.<sup>f</sup> Only with respect to the throne will I be greater than you.”

Joseph in Charge of Egypt

<sup>41</sup>So Pharaoh said to Joseph, “I hereby put you in charge of the whole land of Egypt.”<sup>g</sup> <sup>42</sup>Then Pharaoh took his signet ring<sup>h</sup> from his finger and put it on Joseph’s finger. He dressed him in robes of fine linen and put a gold chain around his neck.<sup>i</sup> <sup>43</sup>He had him ride in a chariot as his second-in-command,<sup>a</sup> and men shouted before him, “Make way<sup>b</sup>!”<sup>j</sup> Thus he put him in charge of the whole land of Egypt.

<sup>50</sup>Before the years of famine came, two sons were born to Joseph by Asenath daughter of Potiphra, priest of On.<sup>o</sup> <sup>51</sup>Joseph named his firstborn<sup>p</sup> Manasseh<sup>d</sup> and said, “It is because God has made me forget all my trouble and all my father’s household.”<sup>52</sup> The second son he named Ephraim<sup>e</sup> and said, “It is because God has made me fruitful<sup>r</sup> in the land of my suffering.”

<sup>53</sup>The seven years of abundance in Egypt came to an end,<sup>54</sup> and the seven years of famine began,<sup>s</sup> just as Joseph had said. There was famine in all the other lands, but in the whole land of Egypt there was food. <sup>55</sup>When all Egypt began to feel the famine,<sup>t</sup> the people cried to Pharaoh for food. Then Pharaoh told all the Egyptians, “Go to Joseph and do what he tells you.”<sup>u</sup>

<sup>56</sup>When the famine had spread over the whole country, Joseph opened the storehouses and sold grain to the Egyptians, for the famine<sup>v</sup> was severe throughout Egypt. <sup>57</sup>And all the countries came to Egypt to buy grain from Joseph,<sup>w</sup> because the famine was severe in all the world.

Joseph’s Brothers Go to Egypt

42 When Jacob learned that there was grain in Egypt,<sup>x</sup> he said to his sons, “Why do you just keep looking at each other?”<sup>2</sup> He continued, “I have heard that there is grain in Egypt. Go down there and buy some for us, so that we may live and not die.”<sup>y</sup>

<sup>3</sup>Then ten of Joseph’s brothers went down to buy grain from Egypt. <sup>4</sup>But Jacob did not send Benjamin, Joseph’s brother, with the others, because he was afraid that harm might come to him.<sup>z</sup> <sup>5</sup>So Israel’s sons were among those who went to buy grain,<sup>a</sup> for the famine was in the land of Canaan also.<sup>b</sup>

“From the land of Canaan,” they replied, “to buy food.”

<sup>a</sup> 43 Or in the chariot of his second-in-command; or in his second chariot <sup>b</sup> 43 Or Bow down <sup>c</sup> 45 That is, Heliopolis; also in verse 50 <sup>d</sup> 51 Manasseh sounds like and may be derived from the Hebrew for forget. <sup>e</sup> 52 Ephraim sounds like the Hebrew for twice fruitful.

41:40–43 There were three symbols of power in the ancient Near East: the signet ring (Est 3:10), the robe (Est 6:11) and the gold chain (Da 5:7, 16, 29).

41:41–57 In the years that followed, Joseph brought about a permanent change in the Egyptian system of land tenure because of the famine and the consequent poverty of the people: Almost all the land became the property of the pharaoh, and the previous owners became his tenants.

41:56 See the note on famine at Ruth 1:1. Also see “Famine in the Ancient Near East” on page 70.

42:9 The custom of sending secret agents to discover facts about an enemy is age-old. The Hebrew word for a spy is suggested by the secrecy with which such an individual did his work. In this verse Joseph accused his brothers of being spies.

<sup>10</sup>“No, my lord,” they answered. “Your servants have come to buy food. <sup>11</sup>We are all the sons of one man. Your servants are honest men, not spies.”

<sup>12</sup>“No!” he said to them. “You have come to see where our land is unprotected.”

<sup>13</sup>But they replied, “Your servants were twelve brothers, the sons of one man, who lives in the land of Canaan. The youngest is now with our father, and one is no more.”<sup>h</sup>

<sup>14</sup>Joseph said to them, “It is just as I told you: You are spies! <sup>15</sup>And this is how you will be tested: As surely as Pharaoh lives, <sup>1</sup>you will not leave this place unless your youngest brother comes here. <sup>16</sup>Send one of your number to get your brother; the rest of you will be kept in prison, so that your words may be tested to see if you are telling the truth. <sup>1</sup>If you are not, then as surely as Pharaoh lives, you are spies!” <sup>17</sup>And he put them all in custody<sup>k</sup> for three days.

CULTURAL AND HISTORICAL NOTES

Famine in the Ancient Near East

GENESIS 42 Subsistence farming and chronic malnutrition were common in the ancient world, and many people perceived themselves at any given time as being only a step ahead of starvation. Natural causes (drought, locusts and blight) brought about frequent famines, as did human actions, from siege warfare to destruction of fields by invading armies to the exacerbating of food shortages by hoarding.<sup>1</sup> Joel 1 recounts the desolation brought about by a locust plague,<sup>2</sup> while Isaiah 7 records the devastation of Judah's agricultural economy by invading Assyrians.

Usually famines in this part of the world were temporary and local, but some long-term and widespread occurrences have been recorded. A protracted and extensive drought and consequent intermittent famines centered in Egypt occurred from the twenty-second to the twentieth centuries B.C., as Egyptian texts from this time period attest. For example, The Admonitions of Ipuwer describes famine-related social chaos in Egypt, indicating that during this time people languished from thirst and desert-like conditions prevailed.<sup>3</sup> This period of frequent famines corresponds to the patriarchal age; the Bible records famines during the lifetimes of Abraham (Ge 12:10), Isaac (26:1) and Joseph<sup>4</sup> (chs. 41–42).

Centuries later, according to Acts 11:28, Agabus predicted a worldwide famine, which did indeed occur between A.D. 44 and 48, during Claudius's reign. This is attested by extra-biblical sources. For example, Tacitus, in The Annals, 12.43, mentioned “scanty crops” during that period.<sup>5</sup>

<sup>18</sup>On the third day, Joseph said to them, “Do this and you will live, for I fear God!<sup>1</sup> <sup>19</sup>If you are honest men, let one of your brothers stay here in prison, while the rest of you go and take grain back for your starving households. <sup>20</sup>But you must bring your youngest brother to me,<sup>m</sup> so that your words may be verified and that you may not die.” This they proceeded to do.

<sup>21</sup>They said to one another, “Surely we are being punished because of our brother.<sup>n</sup> We saw how distressed he was when he pleaded with us for his life, but we would not listen; that’s why this distress<sup>o</sup> has come upon us.”

<sup>24</sup>He turned away from them and began to weep, but then turned back and spoke to them again. He had Simeon taken from them and bound before their eyes.<sup>s</sup>

Their hearts sank and they turned to each other trembling and said, “What is this that God has done to us?”<sup>x</sup>

<sup>29</sup>When they came to their father Jacob in the land of Canaan, they told him all that had happened to them. They said,<sup>30</sup> “The man who is lord over the land spoke harshly to us<sup>y</sup> and treated us as though we were spying on the land. <sup>31</sup>But we said to him, ‘We are honest men; we are not spies.’<sup>z</sup> <sup>32</sup>We were twelve brothers, sons of one father. One is no more, and the youngest is now with our father in Canaan.”

<sup>33</sup>“Then the man who is lord over the land said to us, ‘This is how I will know whether you are honest men: Leave one of your brothers here with me, and take food for your starving households and go.’<sup>a</sup>

<sup>34</sup>But bring your youngest brother to me so I will know that you are not spies but honest men. Then I will give your brother back to you, and you can trade<sup>a</sup> in the land.”<sup>b</sup>”

<sup>35</sup>As they were emptying their sacks, there in each man’s sack was his pouch of silver! When they and their father saw the money pouches, they were frightened.<sup>c</sup> <sup>36</sup>Their father Jacob said to them, “You have deprived me of my children. Joseph is no more and Simeon is no more, and now you want to take Benjamin. <sup>d</sup>Everything is against me!”

<sup>37</sup>Then Reuben said to his father, “You may put both of my sons to death if I do not bring him back to you. Entrust him to my care, and I will bring him back.”

<sup>38</sup>But Jacob said, “My son will not go down there with you; his brother is dead<sup>e</sup> and he is the only one left. If harm comes to him<sup>f</sup> on the journey you are taking, you will bring my gray head down to the grave<sup>g</sup> in sorrow.<sup>h</sup>”

The Second Journey to Egypt

43 Now the famine was still severe in the land.<sup>1</sup> <sup>2</sup>So when they had eaten all the grain they had brought from Egypt, their father said to them, “Go back and buy us a little more food.”

<sup>3</sup>But Judah said to him, “The man warned us solemnly, ‘You will not see my face again unless your brother is with you.’<sup>j</sup> <sup>4</sup>If you will send our brother along with us, we will go down and buy food for you.

<sup>5</sup>But if you will not send him, we will not go down, because the man said to us, ‘You will not see my face again unless your brother is with you.’<sup>k</sup>”

<sup>6</sup>Israel asked, “Why did you bring this trouble on me by telling the man you had another brother?”

<sup>7</sup>They replied, “The man questioned us closely about ourselves and our family. ‘Is your father still living?’<sup>l</sup> he asked us. ‘Do you have another brother?’<sup>m</sup> We simply answered his questions. How were we to know he would say, ‘Bring your brother down here?’”

<sup>8</sup>Then Judah said to Israel his father, “Send the boy along with me and we will go at once, so that we and you and our children may live and not die.<sup>n</sup> <sup>9</sup>I myself will guarantee his safety; you can hold me personally responsible for him. If I do not bring him back to you and set him here before you, I will bear the blame before you all my life.<sup>o</sup> <sup>10</sup>As it is, if we had not delayed, we could have gone and returned twice.”

<sup>15</sup>So the men took the gifts and double the amount of silver, and Benjamin also. They hurried<sup>w</sup> down to Egypt and presented themselves<sup>x</sup> to Joseph. <sup>16</sup>When Joseph saw Benjamin with them, he said to the steward of his house,<sup>y</sup> “Take these men to my house, slaughter an animal and prepare dinner;<sup>z</sup> they are to eat with me at noon.”

<sup>17</sup>The man did as Joseph told him and took the men to Joseph’s house. <sup>18</sup>Now the men were frightened<sup>a</sup> when they were taken to his house. They thought, “We were brought here because of the silver that was put back into our sacks the first time. He wants to attack us and overpower us and seize us as slaves and take our donkeys.”

<sup>19</sup>So they went up to Joseph’s steward and spoke to him at the entrance to the house. <sup>20</sup>“Please, sir,” they said, “we came down here the first time to buy food.<sup>b</sup> <sup>21</sup>But at the place where we stopped for the night we opened our sacks and each of us found his silver—the exact weight—in the mouth of his sack. So we have brought it back with us. <sup>22</sup>We have also brought additional silver with us to buy food. We don’t know who put our silver in our sacks.”

<sup>23</sup>“It’s all right,” he said. “Don’t be afraid. Your God, the God of your father, has given you treasure in your sacks;<sup>d</sup> I received your silver.” Then he brought Simeon out to them.<sup>e</sup>

<sup>26</sup>When Joseph came home, they presented to him the gifts<sup>h</sup> they had brought into the house, and they bowed down before him to the ground.<sup>i</sup> <sup>27</sup>He asked them how they were, and then he said, “How is your aged father you told me about? Is he still living?”<sup>j</sup>

<sup>28</sup>They replied, “Your servant our father is still alive and well.” And they bowed low to pay him honor.<sup>k</sup>

A Silver Cup in a Sack

44 Now Joseph gave these instructions to the steward of his house: “Fill the men’s sacks with as much food as they can carry, and put each man’s silver in the mouth of his sack.<sup>t</sup> <sup>2</sup>Then put my cup, the silver one, in the mouth of the youngest one’s sack, along with the silver for his grain.” And he did as Joseph said.

<sup>3</sup>As morning dawned, the men were sent on their way with their donkeys. <sup>4</sup>They had not gone far from the city when Joseph said to his steward, “Go after those men at once, and when you catch up with them, say to them, ‘Why have you repaid good with evil?’<sup>u</sup> <sup>5</sup>Isn’t this the cup my master drinks from and also uses for divination?<sup>v</sup> This is a wicked thing you have done.’”

THE HISTORICITY OF THE PATRIARCHAL NARRATIVES

GENESIS 44 No mention of the patriarchs (Abraham, Isaac and Jacob/Israel) has been found in extrabiblical documents from their era (c. 1950–1550 B.C.), nor should we expect to find such references. Living as nomads on the fringes of populated areas, the patriarchs wandered between the great empires of Mesopotamia and Egypt, and their activities would have been insignificant to scribes and annalists of that period. The Biblical narratives, which from their side make few references to political events of those times, nevertheless are historical, not myth or fiction. Biblical writers simply selected material appropriate to their theological objectives.

There are various reasons (above and beyond basic faith commitment) for us to accept the Biblical accounts as historically reliable, among them:

Because writing systems were in use by the third millennium B.C., it is unnecessary to assume that a long period of oral transmission existed between the events themselves and their documentation in written records. People of the late third millennium and early second millennium B.C. maintained written records and did not depend on memory for matters they considered to be important.<sup>1</sup> The events of the patriarchal period may have been recorded soon after their occurrence in texts that the Biblical writer later utilized as sources.

Names similar to Serug, Nahor, Terah, Abram/Abraham (Ge 11) and Jacob (ch. 25) appear in documents of the first half of the second millennium B.C., showing that these names were common during that period.<sup>2</sup> The names of the kings mentioned in Genesis 14 are difficult to account for, but evidence does corroborate the story itself.<sup>3</sup>

Apparently some locations mentioned in the patriarchal narrative were sparsely inhabited during the time of the patriarchs and thus are difficult to account for archaeologically.<sup>4</sup> Other locations, however, had larger populations and are known from archaeology and/or texts contemporary to the lives of the patriarchs.<sup>5</sup> There is strong evidence, for example, related to the location of the cities of the plain.<sup>6</sup>

The patriarchs' travel is not to be regarded as improbable. Texts from Ebla (c. 2300 B.C.; see "Ebla" on p. 19) and Cappadocia (c. 2000 B.C.) indicate that travel, commerce and trade regularly occurred throughout the ancient Near East.

Hurrian family law, in force in Haran (see chs. 12; 24) and Nuzi, shed light on some of the activities of Abraham's family that might otherwise perplex us.<sup>7</sup> Another parallel has been found in a letter from Larsa (an ancient Sumerian city on the Euphrates River), indicating that a childless man could indeed adopt his slave as his heir (see 15:2).

The patriarchal stories faithfully reflect customs that were not practiced and institutions that did not exist during later periods, some of which were even prohibited under the religious norms of later Israel. For example, marriage to a half sister (cf. Lev 18:9) or to two sisters simultaneously (cf. Lev 18:18) was permissible during patriarchal times but forbidden in later Israelite society. This fact argues against the idea claimed by some critics that these stories were invented during the period of the Israelite monarchy.

Thus, various contemporary Near Eastern sources lend support to the historicity of the Genesis narrative. God, as we know and believe, revealed himself to real persons within the contexts of time and space.

<sup>11</sup>Each of them quickly lowered his sack to the ground and opened it. <sup>12</sup>Then the steward proceeded to search, beginning with the oldest and ending with the youngest. And the cup was found in Benjamin’s sack. <sup>13</sup>At this, they tore their clothes. <sup>14</sup>Then they all loaded their donkeys and returned to the city.

Joseph Makes Himself Known

45 Then Joseph could no longer control himself before all his attendants, and he cried out, “Have everyone leave my presence!” So there was no one with Joseph when he made himself known to his brothers. <sup>2</sup>And he wept so loudly that the Egyptians heard him, and Pharaoh’s household heard about it. <sup>3</sup>Joseph said to his brothers, “I am Joseph! Is my father still living?” But his brothers were not able to answer him, <sup>4</sup>because they were terrified at his presence.

45:1 <sup>w</sup>Ge 43:31

<sup>5</sup>Then Joseph said to his brothers, “Come close to me.” When they had done so, he said, “I am your brother Joseph, the one you sold into Egypt! <sup>6</sup>And now, do not be distressed and do not be angry with yourselves for selling me here, <sup>7</sup>because it was to save lives that God sent me ahead of you. <sup>8</sup>For two years now there has been famine in the land, and for the next five years there will not be plowing and reaping. <sup>9</sup>But God sent me ahead of you to preserve for you a remnant on earth and to save your lives by a great deliverance.”

<sup>12</sup>“You can see for yourselves, and so can my brother Benjamin, that it is really I who am speaking to you. <sup>13</sup>Tell my father about all the honor accorded me in Egypt and about everything you have seen. And bring my father down here quickly.”

<sup>21</sup>So the sons of Israel did this. Joseph gave them carts, as Pharaoh had commanded, and he also gave them provisions for their journey.<sup>s</sup> <sup>22</sup>To each of them he gave new clothing, but to Benjamin he gave three hundred shekels<sup>a</sup> of silver and five sets of clothes.<sup>t</sup> <sup>23</sup>And this is what he sent to his father: ten donkeys loaded with the best things of Egypt, and ten female donkeys loaded with grain and bread and other provisions for his journey. <sup>24</sup>Then he sent his brothers away, and as they were leaving he said to them, “Don’t quarrel on the way!”<sup>u</sup>

46:32 The shepherd's equipment consisted of a bag made of goat's skin with legs tied, in which food and other articles were placed; a sling for protection against wild animals; a rod (stick) about 30 inches (77 cm) in length with a knob on one end; a staff, usually with a crook on one end; a flute made of reeds for entertainment and for calming the sheep; and a cloak used for bedding at night.

47:1 <sup>m</sup>Ge 46:31 47 Joseph went and told Pharaoh, “My father and brothers, with their flocks and herds and everything they own, have come from the land of Canaan and are now in Goshen.”<sup>m</sup> <sup>2</sup>He chose five of his brothers and presented them before Pharaoh.

47:10 <sup>y</sup>ver 7 <sup>11</sup>So Joseph settled his father and his brothers in Egypt and gave them property in the best part of the land, the district of Rameses,<sup>y</sup> as Pharaoh directed.<sup>12</sup> Joseph also provided his father and his brothers and all his father’s household with food, according to the number of their children.<sup>z</sup>

Joseph and the Famine

47:13 <sup>a</sup>Ge 41:30; <sup>b</sup>Ac 7:11 <sup>13</sup>There was no food, however, in the whole region because the famine was severe; both Egypt and Canaan wasted away because of the famine.<sup>a</sup> <sup>14</sup>Joseph collected all the money that was to be found in Egypt and Canaan in payment for the grain they were buying, and he brought it to Pharaoh’s palace.<sup>b</sup>

47:14 <sup>b</sup>Ge 41:56 <sup>15</sup>When the money of the people of Egypt and Canaan was gone, all Egypt came to Joseph and said, “Give us food. Why should we die before your eyes?<sup>c</sup> Our money is used up.”

47:15 <sup>c</sup>ver 19; <sup>d</sup>Ex 16:3 <sup>16</sup>“Then bring your livestock,” said Joseph. “I will sell you food in exchange for your livestock, since your money is gone.”<sup>17</sup> So they brought their livestock to Joseph, and he gave them food in exchange for their horses,<sup>d</sup> their sheep and goats, their cattle and donkeys. And he brought them through that year with food in exchange for all their livestock.

47:17 <sup>e</sup>Ex 14:9 <sup>18</sup>When that year was over, they came to him the following year and said, “We cannot hide from our lord the fact that since our money is gone and our livestock belongs to you, there is nothing left for our lord except our bodies and our land.<sup>19</sup> Why should we perish before your eyes—we and our land as well? Buy us and our land in exchange for food, and we with our land will be in bondage to Pharaoh. Give us seed so that we may live and not die, and that the land may not become desolate.”

47:22 <sup>f</sup>Dt 14:28-29; <sup>g</sup>Ezr 7:24 <sup>20</sup>So Joseph bought all the land in Egypt for Pharaoh. The Egyptians, one and all, sold their fields, because the famine was too severe for them. The land became Pharaoh’s,<sup>21</sup> and Joseph reduced the people to servitude,<sup>c</sup> from one end of Egypt to the other.<sup>22</sup> However, he did not buy the land of the priests, because they received a regular allotment from Pharaoh and had food enough from the allotment<sup>e</sup> Pharaoh gave them. That is why they did not sell their land.

47:24 <sup>h</sup>Ge 41:34 <sup>23</sup>Joseph said to the people, “Now that I have bought you and your land today for Pharaoh, here is seed for you so you can plant the ground.<sup>24</sup> But when the crop comes in, give a fifth<sup>f</sup> of it to Pharaoh. The other four-fifths you may keep as seed for the fields and as food for yourselves and your households and your children.”

47:25 <sup>i</sup>Ge 32:5 <sup>25</sup>“You have saved our lives,” they said. “May we find favor in the eyes of our lord;<sup>g</sup> we will be in bondage to Pharaoh.”

47:26 <sup>h</sup>ver 22 <sup>26</sup>So Joseph established it as a law concerning land in Egypt—still in force today—that a fifth of the produce belongs to Pharaoh. It was only the land of the priests that did not become Pharaoh’s.<sup>h</sup>

47:27 <sup>j</sup>Ge 17:6; <sup>k</sup>46:3; <sup>l</sup>Ex 1:7 <sup>27</sup>Now the Israelites settled in Egypt in the region of Goshen. They acquired property there and were fruitful and increased greatly in number.<sup>l</sup>

<sup>a</sup> 7 Or greeted <sup>b</sup> 10 Or said farewell to <sup>c</sup> 21 Samaritan Pentateuch and Septuagint (see also Vulgate); Masoretic Text and he moved the people into the cities

47:5–6 The district of Goshen is not large, covering an area of some 900 square miles (2,368 sq km), but because of irrigation it is considered some of the best land in Egypt, excellent for grazing and for certain types of agriculture.

<sup>28</sup>Jacob lived in Egypt<sup>l</sup> seventeen years, and the years of his life were a hundred and forty-seven. <sup>29</sup>When the time drew near for Israel to die,<sup>k</sup> he called for his son Joseph and said to him, “If I have found favor in your eyes, put your hand under my thigh<sup>l</sup> and promise that you will show me kindness and faithfulness.<sup>m</sup> Do not bury me in Egypt,<sup>30</sup> but when I rest with my fathers, carry me out of Egypt and bury me where they are buried.”<sup>n</sup>

“I will do as you say,” he said.

<sup>31</sup>“Swear to me,”<sup>o</sup> he said. Then Joseph swore to him,<sup>p</sup> and Israel worshiped as he leaned on the top of his staff.<sup>q</sup>

Manasseh and Ephraim

48 Some time later Joseph was told, “Your father is ill.” So he took his two sons Manasseh and Ephraim<sup>r</sup> along with him. <sup>2</sup>When Jacob was told, “Your son Joseph has come to you,” Israel rallied his strength and sat up on the bed.

<sup>3</sup>Jacob said to Joseph, “God Almighty<sup>b</sup> appeared to me at Luz<sup>s</sup> in the land of Canaan, and there he blessed me<sup>t</sup> <sup>4</sup>and said to me, ‘I am going to make you fruitful and will increase your numbers.<sup>u</sup> I will make you a community of peoples, and I will give this land as an everlasting possession to your descendants after you.’

<sup>5</sup>“Now then, your two sons born to you in Egypt<sup>v</sup> before I came to you here will be reckoned as mine; Ephraim and Manasseh will be mine,<sup>w</sup> just as Reuben and Simeon are mine. <sup>6</sup>Any children born to you after them will be yours; in the territory they inherit they will be reckoned under the names of their brothers. <sup>7</sup>As I was returning from Paddan,<sup>c</sup> to my sorrow Rachel died in the land of Canaan while we were still on the way, a little distance from Ephrath. So I buried her there beside the road to Ephrath” (that is, Bethlehem).<sup>x</sup>

<sup>9</sup>“They are the sons God has given me here,”<sup>y</sup> Joseph said to his father.

Then Israel said, “Bring them to me so I may bless<sup>z</sup> them.”

<sup>10</sup>Now Israel’s eyes were failing because of old age, and he could hardly see.<sup>a</sup> So Joseph brought his sons close to him, and his father kissed them<sup>b</sup> and embraced them.

<sup>11</sup>Israel said to Joseph, “I never expected to see your face again, and now God has allowed me to see your children too.”<sup>c</sup>

<sup>12</sup>Then Joseph removed them from Israel’s knees and bowed down with his face to the ground. <sup>13</sup>And Joseph took both of them, Ephraim on his right toward Israel’s left hand and Manasseh on his left toward Israel’s right hand,<sup>d</sup> and brought them close to him. <sup>14</sup>But Israel reached out his right hand and put it on Ephraim’s head, though he was the younger, and crossing his arms, he put his left hand on Manasseh’s head, even though Manasseh was the firstborn.<sup>e</sup>

“May the God before whom my fathers
Abraham and Isaac walked, the God who has been my shepherd<sup>g</sup>
all my life to this day,

<sup>16</sup>the Angel who has delivered me from all harm — may he bless these boys.<sup>h</sup>

May they be called by my name and the names of my fathers Abraham and Isaac,<sup>i</sup> and may they increase greatly upon the earth.”

48:5 Jacob “adopted” Ephraim and Manasseh, in a sense replacing Reuben and Simeon (his oldest sons). A literal translation of the final Hebrew clause in this verse might read: “Like Reuben and Simeon they will be to me.” Joseph’s sons “became” Jacob’s firstborn sons.

<sup>19</sup>But his father refused and said, “I know, my son, I know. He too will become a people, and he too will become great.<sup>k</sup> Nevertheless, his younger brother will be greater than he,<sup>l</sup> and his descendants will become a group of nations.”<sup>20</sup>He blessed them that day and said,

“In your<sup>a</sup> name will Israel pronounce this blessing:
‘May God make you like Ephraim<sup>m</sup> and Manasseh.<sup>n</sup>’ ”

So he put Ephraim ahead of Manasseh.

<sup>21</sup>Then Israel said to Joseph, “I am about to die, but God will be with you<sup>b</sup> and take you<sup>b</sup> back to the land of your<sup>b</sup> fathers.<sup>p</sup> <sup>22</sup>And to you, as one who is over your brothers,<sup>q</sup> I give the ridge of land<sup>r</sup> I took from the Amorites with my sword and my bow.”

<sup>7</sup> Cursed be their anger, so fierce, and their fury, so cruel!
I will scatter them in Jacob and disperse them in Israel.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>8</sup> “Judah,<sup>e</sup> your brothers will praise you;
your hand will be on the neck of your enemies;
your father’s sons will bow down to you.<sup>c</sup>

50:2–3 Although it was common practice in Egypt, embalming of Israelites is found only in this chapter. The philosophy behind the Egyptian practice of embalming was a belief that the body was to be

GENESIS 50 The Khu-Sebek inscription, discovered at Abydos in Egypt, dates to the reign of Senwosret III (mid-nineteenth century B.C.) during the Middle Kingdom period of Egyptian history. It contains a first-person account of the career of Khu-Sebek, who rose to power while in the pharaoh's service (apparently as a member of his bodyguard). Khu-Sebek boasts of his zealous service to the pharaoh, particularly highlighting his heroic bravery during a campaign in Canaan against the city of Shechem.<sup>1</sup>

The inscription justifies Khu-Sebek's cenotaph (memorial monument) at the Osiris shrine in Abydos,<sup>2</sup> while also shedding light on two aspects of the Biblical account of Joseph's career. First, someone whose outstanding service caught the pharaoh's eye could be elevated to a high rank within the Egyptian government or military. Second, the most conclusive verification that an individual had earned the pharaoh's favor was a distinguished burial or a memorial erected in his honor. Fittingly, Genesis 50 describes the elaborate funeral of Joseph's father, Jacob/Israel, and mentions the embalming of Joseph.

<sup>12</sup>So Jacob's sons did as he had commanded them: <sup>13</sup>They carried him to the land of Canaan and buried him in the cave in the field of Machpelah, near Mamre, which Abraham had bought as a burial place from Ephron the Hittite, along with the field. <sup>14</sup>After burying his father, Joseph returned to Egypt, together with his brothers and all the others who had gone with him to bury his father.

Joseph Reassures His Brothers

<sup>15</sup>When Joseph's brothers saw that their father was dead, they said, "What if Joseph holds a grudge against us and pays us back for all the wrongs we did to him?" <sup>16</sup>So they sent word to Joseph, saying, "Your father left these instructions before he died: <sup>17</sup>'This is what you are to say to Joseph: I ask you to forgive your brothers the sins and the wrongs they committed in treating you so badly.' Now please forgive the sins of the servants of the God of your father." When their message came to him, Joseph wept.

<sup>18</sup>His brothers then came and threw themselves down before him. <sup>19</sup>"We are your slaves," they said.

<sup>19</sup>But Joseph said to them, "Don't be afraid. Am I in the place of God? <sup>20</sup>You intended to harm me, but God intended it for good to accomplish what is now being done, the saving of many lives. <sup>21</sup>So then, don't be afraid. I will provide for you and your children." And he reassured them and spoke kindly to them.

The Death of Joseph

<sup>24</sup>Then Joseph said to his brothers, "I am about to die. <sup>c</sup> But God will surely come to your aid <sup>d</sup> and take you up out of this land to the land <sup>e</sup> he promised on oath to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob." <sup>f</sup> <sup>25</sup>And Joseph made the sons of Israel swear an oath and said, "God will surely come to your aid, and then you must carry my bones up from this place." <sup>g</sup>

<sup>26</sup>So Joseph died at the age of a hundred and ten. And after they embalmed him, <sup>h</sup> he was placed in a coffin in Egypt.

50:24-26 Joseph died at age one hundred ten. Egyptians considered this an ideal length of life, even though mummies have demonstrated that the average life expectancy in Egypt was between 40 and

50 years. To the Egyptians, Joseph's ripe old age would have been a witness of divine blessing.

TO ENGAGE THE BIBLE MORE, YOU NEED TO ENTER THE WORLD FROM WHICH IT CAME.

From the beginning of Genesis to the end of Revelation, the ARCHAEOLOGICAL STUDY BIBLE is filled with study material of people, places and objects that will open your eyes to the archaeological, historical and cultural contexts of the stories you read and the people you meet in Scripture. From interesting facts regarding kings and empires to photographs of site excavations to weapons of war to ancient jewelry and children's toys, the archaeological record surrounding God's Word will help to energize, contextualize and inform your personal study.

Once you see the Bible through the light of history, you'll never look at Scripture the same way again.
